

Bruce J. Moran

Bruce J. Moran is a senior advisor with strategic planning and operational expertise who works on special national security projects. He has developed clear ‘hands-on’ working solutions for crisis preparedness and crisis readiness scenarios, and possesses unique in-depth experience in addressing the foreign policy aspects of security operations and hi-tech systems (connectivity, interoperability, and interfacing) such as SMART* Fusion protocols and applications. He also has participated in complex problem-solving exercises that contributed to the resolution of cross-cutting challenges involving the interface between national security, military logistics and the environment; national security and energy security; and national security and international lawfare.

As a consultant, Mr. Moran works with public officials in various executive agencies and congressional committees. He has lent assistance to officials within the U.S. Department of Defense, U.S. Department of State and U.S. Department of Commerce. In addition, he has provided support to members of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, House Committee on Foreign Affairs, Joint Economic Committee, Senate/House Committees on Banking/Finance, Senate Permanent Committee on Investigations and the Senate Select Committee on Intelligence. He also consults and liaises with nonprofit think-tanks and corporations.

Mr. Moran has helped to improve the public’s general understanding of national security issues as a part-time host of the Chicago radio show “Stocks & Jocks.”

Bruce Moran earned his Bachelor of Science in Business Administration and Master of Business Administration from DePaul University.
