DOCTOR

ACT I The poor soldier Wozzeck has an illegitimate child with Marie. She admires the handsome drum major as he passes by her window. Wozzeck tells her about the visions that he has had, frightening Marie. The doctor, who pays Wozzeck for use in his dubious medical research, dismisses the visions as mere imagination. Marie gives in to the drum major's advances.

ACT II When Wozzeck notices a pair of earrings that the drum major has given to Marie, she claims that she found them. Wozzeck is suspicious, and Marie is overwhelmed by remorse, but when he confronts her, she defies him. Wozzeck sees her dance with the drum major in a beer garden. When the drunken officer boasts about his conquest, the two men fight, and Wozzeck is knocked down.

ACT III Marie reads the Bible and begs God for mercy. During a walk by a pond outside town, Wozzeck makes ironic remarks to her about her fidelity. When she tries to escape, he stabs her. Drinking and dancing in a tavern, Wozzeck is unable to explain why he has blood on his arm. He rushes off to search for the knife and throws it into the pond, then wades further into the water to wash the blood off his hands. He drowns. The neighbor children tell Marie's son that his mother is dead, but he does not understand and keeps singing and playing.
