The Miracle of the Torah Crowns

You may have seen in last month's Window that we are now the proud caretakers of a beautiful Torah scroll from the Jewish community in Zanesville Ohio. While the synagogue there, Beth Abraham Synagogue recently closed, we will be using their Torah scroll here at TBS, and in so doing, keeping that Jewish community alive spiritually for many years. I have often found that each Torah scroll has its own personality, something unique and special about it, something that connects it to its original community. I certainly feel that way whenever we open our Temple's original Torah scroll, that lived for many years in the Pinkus Synagogue in what now is the Czech Republic. Though that community has also been disbanded, when we read from that Torah scroll, it is as if we are connecting directly with the men and women of the Pincus synagogue, and are bringing life back to their community.

Along with the Torah scroll from Zanesville, we also received a number of beautiful rimonim, which are ornate Torah crowns. Each rimon, each crown is unique and has a history of its own. I am reminded of one of my favorite true stories involving Torah crowns. In case you need a little reminder that miracles can happen, I present to you the story of the Two Rimonim:

"Denny Pinkus lived in Old Jaffa, Israel and ran a Jewish antique gallery there. Among the items of silver he offered for sale was a big silver rimon, a Torah crown. You may know that the Torah has two crowns, one on each side. Denny explained that one day, a middle aged man came into his shop with the crown. "I don't want much for it," he said. "I kept it for so many years, since I was a child. I was born in Germany. It was kristallnacht, and we all had to run to the synagogue in order to save something. I was a little boy then. And old man opened the Torah ark and handed me this rimon, this Torah crown, and said to me 'run!' So I did. Then I was taken in by a Christian family. I did not ever see my family again. I went from there to Romania. That's where I came from now. I'm a newcomer to Israel, and I needed the money."

While the Torah crown was beautiful and unique, it didn't make any sense for Denny to buy them for his shop. Who would want one Torah crown, when they were supposed to be a pair. But against his better judgment, he bought the crown and put it on display in his store.

One morning, after many years had passed, a woman came into Denny's shop, who wanted to sell some silver objects. "She opened her bag," he said, "and I could not believe what I saw. The second rimon, the second Torah crown." I asked her where she got it, and she replied, "I am a new immigrant from Argentina. I was born in Germany. It was that terrible day, kristallnacht, when the Nazis started to destroy the synagogues. We all ran to our synagogue, to save some of the things that were dear to us. I ran there too. When I was next to the Torah I saw this rimon lying there. I took it, then when we got home I kept it with my dolls hidden away. I was sent to a convent to live with nuns. After that I moved to Argentina. Now I live here."

Denny couldn't believe what he was hearing. "Do you have any brothers or sisters?" "Yes, I had a brother, but as far as I know he was killed in a concentration camp." "How old was he?" "He was three years older than I was." She had tears in her eyes, and I did too, Denny remembers.

"I bought all the silver she had, and after she went away I compared one rimon with the other. Everything, every detail, was exact. There was no mistake. These two rimonim were born together, they were a pair. After a few weeks of research, I found the man through the Jewish Agency, and I asked the same questions again. Yes, he had a sister, three years younger than him. She didn't make it out. They were from the same small town."

Denny said to the man, "I know where your sister is, and she is very much alive. She's here in Israel. That rimon you saved and the rimon she saved are identical. I think you can meet your sister now."

They got in Denny's car, and drove to his sister's apartment, ten minutes away. It was his sister. A history of forty four years passed in the room in seconds. You need two rimonim for the Torah. They are together now. Brother and sister – the two crowns.”

This beautiful true story reminds us that miracles can still happen in our world, even after so much pain and suffering. As Spring approaches, may we remember that sometimes miracles happen, and sometimes we need to work to make those miracles occur, to help our fellow human beings, and be God's hands on earth. I invite you to come to Temple anytime to see the beautiful Torah scroll and rimonim, the Torah crowns of which we are now care takers. May they remind us of life's possibilities.

Mitzvah Day and Passover - a Match Made in Egypt

While celebrating Passover at our community and family Seders last week, we retold the Passover story, including its most climactic moment, the splitting of the Sea of Reeds. Many of us--particularly if we grew up with the Ten Commandments or Prince of Egypt films--may recall Moses lifting his staff and the sea miraculously parts.

However, our ancient teachers tell a different version of the story. A midrash (sort of ancient Jewish fanfiction) describes how the sea did not immediately split when the Israelites arrived at the shore.

Frightened by Pharaoh growing closer with his chariot army, the twelve tribes started arguing which tribe was going to head into the churning waters first. During the chaos, an Israelite named Nachshon ignored the argument and leapt bravely into the sea.

Meanwhile, not knowing what to do, Moses decided to pray to God. God heard Moses praying and exclaimed to him, "Why are you so swept up in your lengthy prayers, when My people are about to get swept away by the sea?" And Moses responded, "What else, God, can I do?" God replied, "Go talk to the people! Get your staff! Do something!"

At the same time, Nachshon was in danger. The sea got to his knees, rose to his torso, and then approached his ears. Nachshon was about to be completely covered by the water when the sea finally divided and allowed the Israelites to cross to freedom. The rabbis tell us that it is only because of Nachshon's bravery that God split the waters.

This story teaches us a powerful lesson about the balance of prayer and action. Prayer is of course an important aspect of our lives, and can provide comfort, healing, awareness and gratitude. However, we cannot hope to build a better world without leaping into it and actively trying to create that world - even if it means going to a new place, making time in our already busy schedules, not to mention the necessary discomfort of acknowledging another person's suffering and pain. As Rabbi Tarfon says, "It is not upon you to complete the work, but neither are you free to desist from it." We might not be able to solve all of the world's problems - but neither can we assume another will solve the issue (as each tribe tried to pass off responsibility on the other), or depend on God to heal the world for us (as Moses did).

In fact, social action can be prayer. While reflecting on marching with Martin Luther King Jr in Selma, Rabbi Abraham Joshua Heschel wrote, "Legs are not lips and walking is not kneeling. And yet our legs uttered songs. Even without words, our march was worship. I felt my legs were praying."

With this in mind, we hope you will take part in our annual Mitzvah Day on April 22nd! The entire Temple Beth Shalom community is invited to be a "Nachshon" and leap into acts of tikkun olam, repairing the world, both at our synagogue and also in several off-site projects. From making sack lunches and donating blood, collecting gently used books and jerseys to socializing therapy dogs and cooking dinner at the Ronald McDonald House, there are so many ways to pray with our hands, feet and hearts.

I would like to end with one more Passover story. We learn the Israelites left Egypt in such a rush, their bread didn't have time to rise. However, our tradition notes that Miriam made the time to bring timbrels and other musical instruments - as a prophet, she knew redemption would come and the Israelites would celebrate.

May our Mitzvah Day be filled with Nachshon's courage and Miriam's optimism! May our actions not only make a difference in our community, but may we also celebrate it by further incorporating mitzvot and community service into our daily lives.

Dayenu, Chad Gadya and Let My People Go

Passover is around the corner and we are focusing once again on the saga of the Exodus from Egypt. The Passover Seder (Pesach, festival of unleavened bread, festival of the paschal offering) fulfills the biblical commandment from God written in the Book of Exodus to teach and re-teach in every generation the story of Passover. Songs help reinforce, add group involvement and bring life to the many themes or meanings in our Passover story.

“Dayenu” means “It would have been enough”. The song is a message of thanks and gratitude to God. It is important to appreciate even the simplest of favors. “If God did a simple favor for us and didn’t do anything else, it would have been sufficient”, even if granting more favors would have helped the Hebrews to escape slavery sooner, or helped contribute to less suffering.

“Chad Gadya” is a Hebrew phrase meaning: “One Kid”, where “kid” in this case means a baby goat. This Passover song chronologically describes all the empires throughout Jewish history that have occupied the Land of Israel who, one by one have been destroyed by successive empires, with the Jewish nation at the bottom, symbolized by the baby goat. The purpose of the song is to teach that every evil-doer, no matter how strong, will eventually suffer the consequences of their actions at the hands of God. This song inspires a firm and mature faith and belief in the power of God.

I used the picture book, “one Little Goat” adapted and illustrated by Marilyn Hirsh to teach the song. The children were fascinated to learn which country represented each character. They are:

Kid - Jewish people, Cat - Assyria (Iraq), Dog - Babylon (S. Iraq), Stick - Persia (Iran), Fire - Macedonia, Water – Rome, Ox – Syria, Butcher – Crusaders, Angel of Death – Turks, God – sends Jews back to Israel.

“Let My People Go” is a spiritual in which the text is taken from Exodus 7:26. After learning these songs, children enjoyed acting out the parts of Moses, Pharaoh and the Jewish people.

These songs are included in all of the Haggadahs that I have ever seen. Please include these songs in this year’s Seder to reinforce the Passover themes and to give your family and guests the opportunity to be musically involved in the mitzvah of retelling the story of the Exodus from Egypt.

Annual Meeting—Sunday, May 6th at 10:30 am (NA JCC)

Order. By the time you're reading this, it will be time for the Passover Seder which, literally, means "order". There is a ritual and we follow the procedure. We drink the wine, we tell the story, we sing the songs, we eat the special foods. We follow the order.

For some Jews, the holiday is filled with memories of Seders past. Everyone remembers how their Bubbe served the gefilte fish and what jokes Zayde said whenever a specific moment in the Seder arrived.

For Jews by choice, Passover comes with a special set of rules to followed, somehow making it easier to embrace newly adopted faith. Future Passovers will bring memories of which years the matzo balls were like rocks and which years they were fluffy clouds.

No matter what category applies to you, there's always something special about that first bite of matzo and there's no denying how good, a week later, that first bite of pizza tastes.

And speaking of order . . . Seriously, this is the Co-President's Article, we had to get around to Temple Beth Shalom business sometime . . . it's almost time for the Annual Meeting. It's on Sunday, May 6 at 10:30 a.m. at the New Albany JCC. You can drop the kids off for Sunday School then join us for bagels, coffee, and a business meeting. There are some important matters to discuss and vote on, including the 2018-19 TBS Budget and the new Board of Trustees. We'll also honor retiring Board members and hear reports from the Rabbi and the Executive Director. It's the one time of year that we ask everyone to be participate in the running of Temple Beth Shalom.

So, we hope you enjoy your Seder, whether it's your first or your seventieth. And we hope to see you on May 6. Chag Sameach!

Guest Book Review— “Sweet Like Sugar” by Wayne Hoffman

By Joy Seeskin

Note from Steve Seeskin, Library Committee Chairperson: This month The Kosher Bookworm features a book review by my wife, Joy. Of course, the reviewed book is shelved as a part of the TBS Library collection in the Fiction Section. Thank you to Joy and hopefully she will accomplish two things: 1) encourage you to read the reviewed book and 2) encourage you to submit (to steve.seeskin@gmail.com) and share a review of what you have recently read.

Sweet Like Sugar, a novel by Wayne Hoffman is an insightful story. The author chooses a very difficult time in the life of a self-employed marketing executive, twenty-seven year old, Benjamin Steiner. Benji is a conflicted young man who struggles with where he belongs socially and religiously. He knows he is Jewish but resists the “rules” as he calls them and is not an observant Jew. His Jewish experiences at this time revolve around Life Cycle and Holiday events coordinated by his semi observant very opinionated mother.

Benji is barely scraping by with his business and is furiously working on a proposal for an ad campaign he hopes to land for a popular gay bar. He is unexpectedly found in the company of a rabbi he has never met, Rabbi Zuckerman. Rabbi Z needs the coolness of Benji’s office on hot afternoons as the air conditioning of Benji’s office is working, and not so much in the bookstore of the Rabbi.

Orthodox Rabbi Zuckerman has recently lost his wife and is suffering from overwhelming grief and loneliness. His wife Sophia, was to him his bashert, a Yiddish word meaning the person you are fated to meet. When he mentions bashert to Benji, Benji has his doubts as to whether there is a bashert for him.

Benji and Rabbi Z establish a close and unlikely friendship. Over a period of months Benji transports the Rabbi to and from his bookstore, morning and evening. Often, they share a coffee and a sweet snack while Benji listens to the Rabbi’s stories. Telling these stories seem to bring the rabbi to life again.

Rabbi Z tries to convince Benji that to be a good Jew is not dependent on his attending Friday night services or observing other rituals. Rabbi Z told Benji that he, Benji, has disconnected from his Jewishness and he needs to reconnect. He told Benji that, “Judiasm is not only about refraining from doing bad things. It is also about doing good things.”

Sweet Like Sugar explores issues including secrets, friendships, romance, and religion. This book is worth your time if only to make you think about your “bashert” and what it might take for you to be a good Jew.

Wayne Hoffman writes for several publications such as the Washington Post, Village Voice and others. He has authored three novels. He lives in New York City and the Catskills.
