

SOME MOONSHINE IS LEGENDARY
AND SOME IS MADE BY LEGENDS,
OURS IS BOTH!

LEGENDS...

With the onset of the Prohibition era, the 1920's and 1930's found the Bondurant Brothers of Franklin County Virginia leading the way in one of the county's biggest and most profitable industry... the illegal making and distribution of whiskey and moonshine.

A NEW ERA...

Fast forward eighty years, Prohibition has been abolished and Robert Bondurant, the grandson of Franklin County's most famous moonshiner, is reviving the family legacy of making moonshine. But this time Robert is legally licensed by both the federal government and the Commonwealth of Virginia to operate a distillery in Chase City.

Robert set out to make the distillery a living history lesson. Stepping into the plant is like stepping back in time. There is a viewing area of the stills which use the same prohibition style processes for creating moonshine along with a recipe which replicates the Prohibition era family moonshine recipes.
