Biography

Lowell James Messing, age 79, passed away January 21, 2021 at McLaren Port Huron Hospital. Lowell was born September 6, 1941 in Sherman Township to the late Wilfred and Wanda (Skorka) Messing, the fourth of five sons. The stories about those five boys and their countless adventures are endless. Lowell started his trucking career working for his father hauling milk at a very young age. He married Dolores Mae Holdwick, the love of his life, in 1960. They were such a beautiful couple together. He served in the US Army from 1959 to 1962, part of that time stationed in Korea. When he returned, he began farming and working for his father. He eventually began his own trucking company, Woody Acres Trucking, working with his son, Kurt for 35 years. Lowell named his trucking company to honor his father, whose nickname was Woody. Lowell also was one of the first in the area to own and operate a large tree moving machine. He has transplanted many large trees all over the state. He was very passionate about his work but he also loved the old country music, playing the accordian, but only to his grandchildren and back in the day, loved a good western. If you did hear him laugh, it was surely a contagious laugh, especially when he would watch those old comedies on TV. We will miss the old wise-wisdom, never afraid to give you his opinion, dad, brother, uncle, friend.
