

2017 John Kreslin Scholarship Fund

While many young people are making positive choices, the fact remains that underage drinking and illicit drug use is a serious problem. There are many risks associated with the use of alcohol and drugs: Alcohol poisoning, overdose, motor coordination, impulse control, memory loss, judgment and decision making capacity.

While academics, athletics and community service are very important characteristics of well-rounded individuals, I believe that more focus needs to be placed on how we build relationships with our peers.

As your parents launch you off into a new world of challenges, choices and decisions, how will you focus on building those relationships to help insure positive decision making through your entire college experience?
