LOOKING UP ...

With warm weather coming, we can look forward to getting outside to enjoy the Night Sky. In early evenings in April, in the western sky, most of the Winter Constellations are still visible until 9:00 p.m. or so.

Through most of April and May, Venus is visible, bright and low, in the west, northwest, at sun set. An hour before sunrise, Mars and Saturn are morning planets visible in the east. During the first half of April, they appear quite close together, mars is lower to the left of Saturn.

On April 1st, Jupiter will rise in the east, southeast, three hours after sunset. It will rise earlier and earlier as the months progress. There is a small meteor shower in April which peaks the morning of April 22nd. An hour before sunrise, look south and high in the sky. The Constellations Lyra, for whom the Lyrids meteors are named, rises in the northeast about 9:00 p.m. The best chance to see these meteors is any time between April 21st and 23rd.

PRAYER and HYMN SINGS

and Sunday, May 13th

Please note that our time of prayer and song will be held on the third Sunday evenings of April and May. This is a slight change from our regular schedule. We pray that this time will be available to our regular crowd and that others will be able to join us. Look through the hymnal, choose your favorite song, we do our best to sing at least one of each person's most loved hymns.

Prayer will include silent and spoken prayer. We rejoice that our Father in Heaven hears us when we seek him. We pray for all requests, for our Church Body here and throughout the World. We pray for Love and Peace to envelope MANKIND. Join us as we make a joyful noise. Your presence at this gathering will make a positive difference for all of us.
