

BREE-ROSE COOPER – HIP HOP

(RECREATIONAL & COMPETITION)

Bree-Rose Cooper has been dancing for about 17 years. She currently attends Towson University pursuing my BFA in Dance and Choreography. She also been teaching dance for a few years now. She has danced on Broadway, off-broadway, local and school musicals. At the age of 15 she had the privilege to dance in LA and perform on a live television broadcast under the direction of Debbie Allen. At this moment, Bree realized she had a passion for hip hop/commercial dance and chose to change her route from wanting to be a company member at in a professional dance company to pursuing a career as a professional dancer in the commercial industry. In 2019 she went returned to LA and under the direction of Bryan Clawson of Hollywood Biz, she intensely began training with multiple choreographers. This is where she began to deeply understand commercial dance industry. One of Bree's future goal is to own her own dance school where she trains dancers to be prepared as professional dancers in the industry.
