

Texas Health Presbyterian Hospital Dallas

Oncology Rehabilitation Program

Oncology rehabilitation at Texas Health Presbyterian Hospital Dallas offers compassionate and customized care for oncology patients. The program can help minimize symptoms such as pain, fatigue, loss of strength, loss of range of motion, impaired functional mobility, and cognitive impairment which may be associated with cancer and its treatment.

Outpatient Rehabilitation Services

The Outpatient Rehabilitation Services Department is staffed with professionals trained to deliver specialized rehabilitation care to cancer patients. Treatment services may include:

- Physical Therapy
- Occupational Therapy
- Speech-Language Pathology
- Aquatic Therapy (at Finley Ewing Cardiovascular & Fitness Center)

The team also has access to physicians on the medical staff, oncology nurses, registered dietitians and a wide variety of other advanced services available throughout the hospital.

Oncology Rehabilitation Program

Who Can Benefit from the Oncology Rehabilitation Program

Cancer patients can benefit from rehabilitation whether they are newly diagnosed or they have completed their treatments. Prehabilitation - beginning therapy prior to surgery, chemotherapy and radiation, has been shown to be particularly effective.

Therapeutic Benefits

Specially trained professionals create individualized goals and treatment plans to address each patient's unique needs. Therapeutic benefits may include:

- Minimized pain and fatigue
- Increased range of motion, flexibility, strength and stability
- Improved balance and functional mobility
- Improved swallowing
- Decreased swelling and lymphedema management
- Patient and family training and education

Insurance Coverage

The Oncology Rehabilitation Program is covered by most insurance.
