JANET STATON & JS MILO AND STITCH

JS MILO AND STITCH

I purchased “Happy” when he was 7 months old from Shelly Martin. She bred and raised him at her home place in Columbus, TX which is only a little over an hour from Bastrop. I was impressed with the Firewater Ta Fame babies and was interested in purchasing one. I went to look at another colt she had advertised but instantly fell in love with Happy. When he turned two I sent him to Cody Little who had started several colts I had ridden. He does an amazing job and I can go straight to the barrels when I get them home.

Happy has always been an easy colt to train. When I started him I would work him a couple of weeks and then not touch him for a couple of weeks. He always retained everything so his training was easy. I really never had any intentions of selling him but I had 2 futurity colts for 2018 and when the payments to futurities started rolling in I wasn't sure I could swing it all! It was about that time that Jennifer Fite called and asked if I knew of any good colts for sale. She was looking to purchase one and send him to me to train. She inquired about the cost of training and other futurity questions. After about a week or so thinking about it, I called her back and we made an agreement with Happy. It was real important to me to get to finish his training and haul him his futurity year. I knew he was a super nice colt and Jennifer wasn't into the training or seasoning part so it worked out perfectly. Selling him also allowed me the opportunity to enter Slot Races that I probably would not have risked doing. It was a win-win for the both of us!

I was excited to go to the Diamonds and Dirt Futurity. It is one of the highest paying futurities with great prizes and it is only 2 hours from my house. I won 3rd in the average in 2017 so I felt pretty confident and comfortable in that arena. Happy made a great run in the first go. I really couldn't fault it and it turned out to be the fastest time of the entire event 14.811. He was flying and turned every barrel perfect. I opted to turn out my second run and take him home to relax before the slot race on Friday night. I did take him up to our local rodeo arena that has a cement wall at the second barrel similar to that in Waco. That wall tends to make them short with the stands on that side so I pushed into the second a couple of times before I left to go back to Waco. In the futurity finals Saturday night I drew number 37 out of 40. Sitting and waiting to run was the hardest part. There had been some great runs! Especially from my friend Kenna Squires who had come in setting second and was winning the finals with a 14.9. Happy was so focused and he delivered. He made another amazing run of a 14.8. I knew he had won it and was pretty much in shock when the announcer stated how much money he had won for the week! I don't cry easily but I did get a bit teary eyed!

My slot race run was on the wild side and by far our worst run but still good enough to win the race. He got a hair past the first and I got a little behind him going across the pen. Because of that, we rocked the second and I am still not sure how it stood back up! He was flying and inhaled the third! When he went to leave the third my hand slipped off the horn and I nearly came off the back of him on the way home! I thought "Good Lord...please don't let me fall off on the way home with a packed house of spectators!!" I broke 3 finger nails trying to get back with him! I have never won a slot race, so it was very exciting for me. It was an extra special win because Southwest Stallion Station was the sponsor and Dr. Charles Graham has been a family friend all my life. I was honored to win the race that he and his grandson Tyler sponsored. Happy won $93,326 for the weekend and now his LTE are $151,249. Beyond my wildest dreams for sure!!

Happy only runs in the Perfect Bit. It's all I run him in and he loves it. It helps him stay collected and lets me stay out of his way! I ride a Coats saddle and use a 5 Star saddle pad. He eats 14% feed from the local coop and all the alfalfa he wants. He gets DAC oil and Purina Outlast.

Once my horses are patterned and working nicely, I just exercise them about 3 times a week. I rarely work the barrels. If they need tuning, I use drills away from the pattern to do what they need.

Teacher to Futurity Trainer!! That still makes me laugh! I have trained barrel horses all my life but I never would take the risk to make it my living. I still consider myself a teacher...they are just 4-legged now. But seriously there is not a lot of difference between teaching elementary school and training futurity colts!!

A special thank you to all the sponsors and producers of Diamonds and Dirt. It is certainly one of the premier futurities and I am so happy to have it here in Texas. The Schillers go all out to make it a spectacular event!

Janet

THE WAY OF HORSES – CANINE OR WOLF TEETH?

By Eleanor Blazer ©2018

During a conversation with a new horse owner she casually mentioned her trainer had recommended she have the canine teeth removed from her mare. After asking a few questions I figured out either the trainer or she had the canine teeth confused with wolf teeth. This is a common mix-up.

Horses basically have two types of teeth – incisors and molars. The incisors are across the front. Mature horses will have six on the bottom and six on the top, for a total of 12. The incisors are used for nipping off blades of grass during grazing. Molars are located behind the interdental space (bars). Adult horses will have four premolars and three molars—top and bottom, on each side, for a total of 28. Molars are used for chewing and grinding the feed.

Wolf teeth are premolars with short roots. They are the first set of teeth just past the interdental space. Wolf teeth are present in both males and females, and generally develop during the first six to 12 months of age.

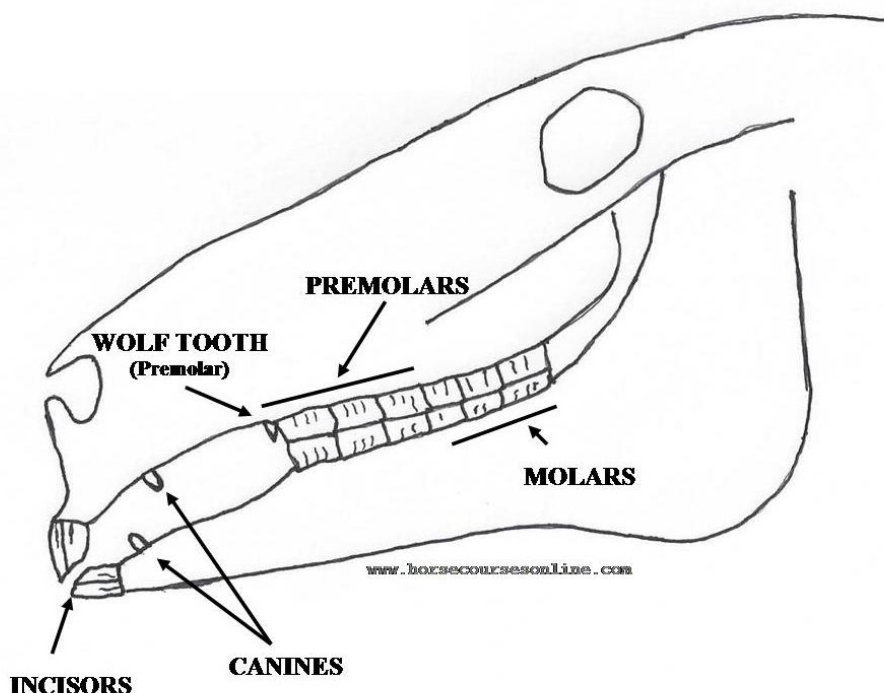

All four wolf teeth may erupt; only one, several or none at all. The teeth that do not break above the gum line are called “blind”. Wolf teeth do not continue to erupt throughout the horse’s lifetime like the other molars.

Wolf teeth have nerves and a sensitive periodontal ligament that helps hold them in place, and they can cause problems. During training or if the horse tosses his head, the bit may come in contact with the sensitive tooth resulting in an undesirable reaction - another head toss, another clang against the wolf tooth and another head toss. Even the blind wolf tooth can be sensitive causing the horse to react when the bit makes contact with the area.

Wolf teeth can also erupt in different locations. Instead of being right next to the adjacent premolar the wolf tooth may be closer to the interdental space where the bit will be placed. Frequently this misplaced wolf tooth is blind and hard to detect, but very sensitive.

Wolf teeth should be removed as early as possible, generally when the horse is a yearling and before starting training. At this time the tooth has not matured and fused to the surrounding bone. Consult a qualified equine dentist or veterinarian as wolf teeth contain nerves, blood vessels and the strong ligament which will need to be detached. The horse will require mild sedation.

Canine teeth at 7 years old

Do not allow anyone to use a hammer and chisel to knock the wolf tooth out. This is very painful to the horse. Part of the root may be left behind and nerves exposed, leading to more problems.

Between the age of four and six years another set of teeth will appear in male horses. This set is neither incisors nor molars, but are canine teeth or “tushes”. Canine teeth will be located behind the third incisors, in front of the interdental space. A gap will separate the third incisor from the canine tooth. Some mares may develop canines; generally they will be small buds. Canine teeth do not serve a purpose, but can be used for fighting.

The removal of canine teeth is not recommended. The roots are very deep and removal would be considered major surgery. If the horse is using the canine teeth for aggression veterinarians recommend the teeth be trimmed and buffed. Care must be taken that not too much is trimmed as the pulp can be exposed. This also leaves the teeth viable in case they need to be used as an anchor during a jaw fracture repair.

Canine teeth should not interfere with the bit. If the bit is hanging low enough to clang against the canine teeth the bridle is not adjusted correctly. Handlers must pay attention when removing the bridle – slowly lower the headstall which will allow the horse to work the bit over the canines, so the bit will gently drop out of the mouth.

Canine teeth can be very painful when they are erupting or coming in. Trainers and riders of young horses should be aware of the changes going on within the mouth during this time. Just be patient while the canine teeth are erupting; once they are in the sensitivity will diminish.

A tip on how to remember the difference between a canine and wolf tooth: “canine” starts with a “c”, as does “colt” and “corner”. The canine tooth is primarily found in male horses and located in the corners of the mouth; wolf teeth can be found in both sexes and are farther back.
