About the Professor

The PNWGS is honored to welcome Amy S. Oxentenکو, M.D., FACP, FACG, AGAF, Professor of Medicine and gastroenterologist with special interest in celiac disease and malabsorption. She completed her IM Residency, Chief Residency and GI Fellowship at Mayo Clinic in Rochester, being the recipient of the IM Residency's Outstanding Achievement Award, GI Division's Borgen Award, and Institutional Mayo Brothers' Distinguished Fellowship Award. After joining the faculty at Mayo Clinic in Rochester, she served as Program Director of Mayo's GI Fellowship and Advanced GI Fellowship Programs, later serving as the IM Residency Program Director and as Associate Chair for Education in the Department of Medicine. She then went on to serve as Chair of Medicine at Mayo Clinic in Arizona, then returned to Mayo Clinic in Rochester where she currently serves as Vice Dean of Practice for all Mayo Clinic sites.

She also serves as the program sponsor for the Whitney MacMillan Physician Leadership Business Academy, a joint collaboration between Mayo Clinic's Office of Workforce Learning and Arizona State University's W.P. Carey School of Business. Dr. Oxentenکو serves on the ACG Board of Trustees and Executive Team, slated as ACG President in 2024-2025. She also serves as Vice Chair on the Executive Committee of the Internal Medicine ACGME Review Committee. Dr. Oxentenکو has been the recipient of Mayo's Department of IM Distinguished Contributions to Medical Education Award, Mayo Clinic School of GME Program Director of the Year Award, Minnesota's ACP Laureate Award and was awarded the Mayo Clinic Distinguished Educator Award. She was named the 2020 Woman Disruptor of the Year by Healio GI and was recognized as one of the “top 100 alumni” by her undergraduate alma mater. She has used her social media platform to advance issues in diversity, equity and inclusion, leadership development and research dissemination.
