In addition to the Executive Council, Burton was a longtime member of Grafton County's three-member Commission. He was first elected in 1990, took office in January 1991 and was most recently re-elected last year, without opposition. Commissioner Burton was a staunch advocate for the employees of Grafton County and believed that they were the heart of the County operations. He supported the building of the new Jail, feeling that its time was long overdue. It was with his support that the Jail stands as it is today. Commissioner Burton also stood firm in his support for the new biomass project which is currently up and running and saving the County thousands of dollars a year. He continued to offer backing to UNHCE and its programs and was a tireless supporter of programs that benefited the people of Grafton County. He believed strongly in the County Farm and its dairy production.

The area in which the old Jail stood has been named in his honor on the County property and he will be forever fondly remembered for all his achievements on a County level.

On Nov. 1, the state's political elite converged on Bretton Woods to pay tribute to Burton. A marker at a new scenic overlook near the Mount Washington Hotel was dedicated to him, and the Executive Council voted to accept a portrait of Burton that soon will hang in the council's second-floor office at the State House. For his part, Burton said he was satisfied with his record and accomplishments. In true Ray Burton fashion he stated on that day "The bottom line is, it's for public service to the people of New Hampshire,"

The RAY BURTON Community Service

Informational Resource

Brochure

The north country lost a fine man with the passing of Raymond S. Burton in November of 2013. It was always his belief that people should be able to find help in the north country when help was needed.

Over the years that we were fortunate enough to have Ray, he compiled a list of numbers of service providers so that anyone could find help right at their fingertips should the need arise

It is with great honor that we carry on his tradition in providing this information to those who may be in need of service. Please accept this with the compliments of the Grafton County Department of Corrections in memory of our well respected representative of the people.
