

What's a joint account?

A joint bank / investment account is like any other account, except that two or more people own it.

- Each owner has the same privileges and responsibilities and does not need the other owner's permission to use the account or talk to the bank provider about it.

Opening a joint account is a similar process to opening an individual account - both owners have to disclose the usual information and provide identification.