

SAIGON 1969 Aerial photo of U.S. Military Assistance Command, Vietnam (MACV) a joint-service command of the United States Department of Defense, Tan Son Nhut Airbase, Saigon.

Today I decided to explore the entire area of the MACV, looking for any remnants. I spent some time last night, studying maps and aerial photos, to pinpoint the exact location before heading out this morning on my bicycle. (it's about a 50k round trip from my house) The green outline on the aerial photo is the MACV compound and the green line on the "Now" map is the location today. The red lines are from the GPS program I use to track my bike ride. (Strava) As you can see, I pretty much explored most of the area and I am sad to report there was not anything I could find related to the MACV. I will post some photos later. "Then" photo, Tan Son Nhat Association.

