

Mission Trip – Day 2 – August 7, 2018

Chuck here, another day done. Today we had four kids and an adult from the other group from Winston NC. We got a late start, left the center at 8:15, and got to the jobsite around 8:45 and got the water damaged roof sheeting replaced, got the roof paper down, drip edge installed (except last 6 ft) waited most of the morning for the delivery. While we waited we began shingling. The kids went to town with the pneumatic nailers. Kerry kept three nailers loaded and passed up shingles, while I got the first three courses on so the kids were not on the edge. We ended up with eight courses/rows complete and the heat index on the roof was estimated at 130. So we quit again at 3:15. Everyone, but the kids, are exhausted. We plan to get an early start tomorrow and see if we can beat the heat.

Thanks to Karen Harrington for dinner tonight, the “Ma Harrington’s Enchilada Casserole” was delicious. Then it was off to get gas and back to Walmart. Now it’s almost 9:00 and it looks like an early bedtime. More roofing tomorrow.

As I mentioned yesterday at the end of my blog, dean would be back again today and here I am. The indoor crew continued to demolish damaged structure – trim, molding, doors, paneling, drywall, and a new chore today, taking out old installation. A hot, itchy task, which finally made some of us put on painter’s coveralls to help protect us. Carrying all the debris outside to the industrial dumpster was a hot, dirty job. After two days (plus some throwaway from the previous week), we filled the dumpster and we had to get it replaced late in the day with an empty one. With any luck we will finish “mucky” the inside tomorrow.

Nancy spent the entire day cutting the lawn, probably for the first or second time this year. Quite a chore with the grounds being over two acres and all she had was a push mower. When Chuck called it quits we all agreed.

Like Chuck, I wish to pass on my thanks to Karen for a delicious dinner, which we did not have to prepare but just heat up. Excellent enough for most of us to have seconds. All for now. Past my bedtime.

dean

Taking a well deserved break!

Please keep the team in your prayers as they work in extremely challenging weather conditions. Maybe even prayers for cooler weather.