

SFGATE

<https://www.sfgate.com/performance/article/SF-Shakes-makes-Midsummer-magic-13061638.php>

SF Shakes makes 'Midsummer' magic

By Lily Janiak Updated 12:29 pm PDT, Wednesday, July 11, 2018

IMAGE 1 OF 5

Michael Ray Wisely as Nick Bottom and Livia Gomes Demarchi as Titania in San Francisco Shakespeare Festival's "A Midsummer Night's Dream."

"Who are they?" one young audience member whispered to an elder.

TOP O' THE BAY DAILY NEWSLETTER

SFGATE's top stories from across the Bay Area.

You agree to our Terms of Use. Your information will be used as described in our Privacy Notice.

Enter your email address

SIGN UP

RECOMMENDED VIDEO

temporarily rekindle one for those who have lost it. For magic suffuses Rebecca J. Ennals' production of Shakespeare's love-juicesplashed romp, which opened Sunday, July 8, at Pleasanton's Amador Valley Community Park, the first stop on its annual regional tour, Free Shakespeare in the Park.

Costume designer Hyun Sook Kim sews magic into the dress of fairy queen Titania (Livia Gomes Demarchi), all gossamery cascades spangled with woodland trinkets, like bugs suspended in thick spiderwebs, and crowned with a feathered collar as beefy as fur. Ennals makes magic ripple through her staging. When Titania and fairy king Oberon (Stephen Muterspaugh) duke it out, in one of Shakespeare's weirder plot threads, over a little changeling they both want (played on alternating performances by Sol De Souza and Vivaan Mudgal), characters speak each new line as if to cast an ever-stronger spell. These curses don't sucker punch only their intended victim; a whole ensemble of hangers-on registers every thrust and parry as if assailed by a tsunami.

FROM OUR SPONS

A love quadrangle of Athenian mortals is the collateral damage of this fairy fight, as carried out by the mischievous Puck (James Lewis), who's charged with redirecting the four humans' desires with nectar from a magical flower but blunders in the task, sending Hermia (Patricia Austin), Lysander (Akaina Ghosh), Helena (Lauren Spencer) and Demetrius (Ed Berkeley) all lusting after the wrong person.

If not every member of Ennals' ensemble mines range and depth from the text, many excel. When Hermia loses Lysander's affections, Austin assumes the stance of a sumo wrestler and the fury of an ogre. Lewis' Puck, getting his instructions to drop love juice "on sleeping eyelids," laps up each new phrase as if it's the first idea that has ever entered his brain. Michael J. Asberry as Hermia's forbidding father, Egeus, hacks a welcoming path through Shakespeare's thorny syntax, and Spencer's Helena exemplifies why Shakespeare writes so often in monologue. It's not to explain, nor is it to freeze a moment. It's not static at all. It's to puzzle actively from quandary to decision. It's the quicksilver movement of the brain caught and wrestled into tangible, poetic form.

Part of the magic of "Midsummer" is that it isn't all romp. There's mystery and a touch of despair in the way our longings get so easily, so quickly rerouted. One character ends the play under the fairies' spell; will his ever-after be real? Others must accept their lovers, sans apology or forgiveness, after absorbing cruelty upon cruelty during Puck's bumbles. Can real love come from such tenuous armistice?

Ennals' production doesn't slight those darker qualities. It marvels at them, as does Athenian king Theseus (Muterspaugh): "Lovers and madmen have such seething brains, such shaping fantasies, that apprehend more than cool reason ever comprehends."

Lily Janiak is The San Francisco Chronicle's theater critic. Email: ljaniak@sfgate.com Twitter: @LilyJaniak

MORE ON BAY AREA THEATER ✕

The long tail of ShortLived VII, audience-judged theater competition at PianoFight in SF

Dark times cast Mime Troupe in better light,
with socialism-themed 'Seeing Red'

A role and talent perfectly matched in
'Richard III'

Pirates of Peripatetic Players bring theatrical booty
to Noe Valley

© 2018 Hearst Communications, Inc.

H E A R S T

///

