If a Collection Could Talk: Militaria

Thursday, May 12th at 6:30pm

Do you love military history?
Do you collect antique militaria? Looking to share your passion with others?

Join us to share the stories behind your military-related artifacts and connect with other collectors. Take time to look through your treasure trove and select a piece or two to bring with you for a "show and tell" style event at the Library.

Items do not need to be from a particular war, theater of operations or country, but you should be prepared to share what you know about your piece (2-4 minutes).

Every piece in your collection has a story and it is your job to help share it! Militaria enthusiasts, collectors or those with an interest in military history are all welcome!

“As the Sparrow Sees” By Joey Martino

Self-taught Lakeville artist “Joey” Martino uses a unique style of palette knife to create beautiful impressionistic and abstract paintings in acrylics and oils.

The exhibit is a collection of works depicting the beauty of life in the ordinary. Living in New England provides so much beauty, from mountains to beaches and from season to season, you just can't help but be inspired. Mr.

Martino's hope is that with each painting, you will find simple beauty and realize ordinary life offers extraordinary blessings.
