

Lockdown Improprieties

If temporary lockdowns against a potential pandemic such as from SARS-CoV-2 prove to be supported by the facts then their toleration is understandable. If not supported by the facts, at some point extended application of these policies cannot be excused as mere mistakes or incompetence.

Political interventionism in the form of shutdown edicts reflects the interest of the Government-Agency-Medical-Complex. Having purchased its legislative base and won federally granted indemnity for vaccine damage awards and liability immunity, Big-Pharma has in full view, through sponsorship won over the revenue-hungry media networks to further the fiction that only it has the key to public health. Months of headline news on the covid-19 “pandemic” have been manifestly devoid of references to healthy nutrition and lifestyle solutions. Over-the-counter remedies for widespread deficiencies in, vitamins D \(see video\), C, Selenium, Zinc, to start, get virtually no mention. Proponents of the effectiveness of properly administered hydroxychloroquine \(Watch Frontline Doctors Speak\), or Quercetin get blackballed by search engines and social media platforms.

A fear campaign marshals directives mandating masks, quarantines and lockdowns until a vaccine can be rolled-out. A mandated or otherwise compelled vaccination program, and downstream treatments for the harmful effects it might well generate (a boon to Big-Pharma), now appear inevitable with the deflection of the public’s attention away from personal responsibility for health.

As to the virus, the CDC lists Covid-19 deaths to from 2/1/2020 to 9/11/2020 at 178,670 with total deaths from all causes at 1,915,358. Hence, Covid-19 deaths are but 9.3% of deaths from all causes. Unfortunate, yes; but official remedies, including lockdowns, face-masks and experimental vaccines have not yet been demonstrated to effectively reduce case fatalities long-run. While voluntary isolation may not be unreasonable for some high risk groups, the ruinous effects of imposed shutdowns devolve on those most economically un-empowered.

Most troubling however, are the dominant treatment agendas that discourage known successful alternative protocols (mentioned above) which substantively reduce risk of death. Case fatalities attributed to Covid-19 then could well be an order of magnitude smaller than proclaimed, especially when it is admitted by the CDC that co-morbidities existed in all but 6% of Covid-19 mortalities. In other words, in the vast majority of cases, there is some chance that the primary cause of death had been a pre-existing condition that may or may not have been accelerated by Covid-19. These deaths were however attributed to Covid-19.

Although the impact of Covid-19 appears to be more than for an episode of the common flu, data reveals that the virus has peaked with little effect from measures taken to stem its course of spread. All the while, the considerable economic impact from lockdowns gets short shrift.

Following the incentives leaves little doubt as to why the success of the Swedish response of remaining open, or the neglect of other successes in opening schools explained by this Senate hearing with Rand Paul, must be denigrated or ignored.

What we have now amounts to more than corporate wrongdoing, negative externalities, or violations of human rights perpetrated by corporate machinations. There is no need here to catalogue the unprecedented disruption of education, business and loss of livelihoods made possible by government policies usually associated with mobilization in wartime. There is every need, however, to protest the prospect of compulsory multiple weeks of forced quarantine based on the current PCR test where a positive result does not necessarily indicate current infectivity. And more so, there is every need to ward off a mandated experimental vaccine that will generate a significant additional number of dissenters subject to compliance measures—all the more unsettling as all levels of government proceed in disregard of constitutional due process.

Given such neglect, we will likely see rescue fund allocations conditioned on compliance to increasingly audacious official edicts, with many left behind. Already, rental payment moratoriums produce uncompensated losses to owners indiscriminately. Unfortunately remuneration for harm done is not part of the agenda. Stimulus money fares no better for business bankruptcies and permanent employment losses. Perpetuation of a new regime of extravagant budgets, interference with social interactions and economic hardships threaten to be perpetuated by continued lockdown improprieties.
