China Academic Humanities and Social Sciences Library Starts up in PKU

PKU NEWS Friday 2004-03-19 09:14

Peking University, Mar.19th, 2004: China Academic Humanities and Social Sciences Library was formally started in the library of Peking University in the morning of May 15th. Yuan Guiren, vice minister of Education, attended the startup conference and also made a speech.

CASHL (China Academic Humanities and Social Sciences Library) was founded by Ministry of Education to organize higher school libraries, which were preponderant in academic subjects, literature resources and service conditions, to provide higher-level literatures for all the national higher schools and research institutes. Until February of 2004, the database had owned more than 720,000 items from over 1,500 magazines after 1984. Generally speaking, the national center of CASHL will send the whole literature within one to three days in response to the requests of readers.

The shortage of humanities materials and literatures before would be lessened with the use of CASHL and the national center would shoulder the responsibilities of the layout, harmonious work and management for the literature center, pointed out Yuan Guiren in the conference. It was reported that the national center was set in Peking University and Fudan University, while regional centers were in Wuhan University, Nanjing University, Sichuan University, Jilin University and Sun Yat-sen University.

Peking University would support the program of Ministry of Education wholeheartedly and we hoped that all the national higher schools and research institutes would cooperate together, expressed Xu Zhihong, president of Peking University.

The startup conference was presided by professor Dai Longji, curator of the library, Peking University. After the conference, principals of Ministry of Education, Peking University and all the national higher schools and research institutes also participated the academic symposium of CASHL.
