FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

Autism Center for Children to Open in Woodstock

New Center to Offer Advanced Services for Early Diagnosis and Treatment of Autism in Toddlers and Children

Woodstock, GA – April 6, 2016 – Autism Center for Children, a practice advancing early diagnosis and treatment of autism in toddlers, today announced the grand opening date for its new Center north of Atlanta in Woodstock, Georgia. Dr. Julie Crittendon, licensed clinical psychologist, Ph.D., BCBA-D, is the head of the Autism Center. She and other officials and dignitaries will be on hand for the grand opening event and a ribbon-cutting scheduled for Tuesday, April 12 at 4:00pm. The event will take place at the new Center, located at 375 Parkway 575, Suite 120, Woodstock, GA 30188.

For parents concerned about their toddler's social and communication development, the Autism Center for Children will provide accurate identification and treatment of autism -- at the earliest possible signs of detection -- for the most immediate, profound and lasting improvement in their quality of life.

"I am proud to announce the opening of my new practice, the Autism Center for Children," declares Dr. Crittendon. "This is a culmination of all my work at Ole Miss, Kennedy Krieger Institute/Johns Hopkins, University of Tennessee, Vanderbilt and with the Autism Partnership in California. I am fortunate to have great relationships with the leaders in the field of autism research and treatment, and am excited to bring this expertise to my new clients, families and children in Atlanta and North Georgia."

All are invited to attend, enjoy refreshments, tour the Center, meet Dr. Crittendon, and learn more about their services for early diagnosis and effective treatment of autism.
