

Artist Benson Todd has no problem with making a piece of art come alive and pleasing to the viewer even with a serious subject. Vibrant colors and loose brush strokes create a “feel good” environment for those of us that want that. Benson usually creates a series of a few paintings at a time, by concentrating on a variation on one subject at a time such as bicycling, different targets, or tacos for example. Or a particular composition such as an oval will trigger certain subject matter, like a “round-a-bout” intersection of a road, or a dance floor. Or nine separate images in 3 vertical columns can transform tacos into hearts. Also versatile in various media, including combinations of them such as collage and paint, Benson Todd can envelop portraits, nature, or whatever subjects one enjoys.

Benson Todd has been in local and regional shows which are available on her Resume, along with her Bio and Education in Art.
