

A tax-exempt public charity, the Foundation seeks ways to provide adaptive support to address barriers to continuing education and it understands the intentionality needed in the urban and other cultural contexts. Just as before he became President, Abraham Lincoln was entrepreneurial in his learning approach by selecting adaptive principle-centered methods of preparation to obtain his law credential, we seek to support this same spirit which was at the core of his genius. His passing of the bar exam is a symbol to this day that learning, academic achievement and obtaining credential recognition are not limited to conventional learning approaches. The 21st century needs landscape demands new knowledge and skills to address the complex issues of today which can no longer be resolved by conventional approaches and technical application alone. Displacement and barriers surface on many levels today. Therefore, we have adopted the practice of seeking first to understand the depth and breadth of your complex issue, then seeking the adaptive principle-centered system and program to meet your needs.
