FALL FERTILIZER

It's not unusual to fertilize your lawn in the spring, but don't let the cooler temperatures of autumn fool you. Fall actually is the best time to fertilize the grass, even better than springtime. After the summer's heat and humidity, grass regains its strength before winter with a good fall fertilizing. Fertilizing now also helps grass develop a thick and deep root system, so it can better survive next summer's heat.

We carry a variety of fall fertilizers to meet your needs. Stop by!

COVER CROPS

A Little Background: Cover crops are plants growing in a garden to improve a soil's physical structure and fertility. As a cover crop grows, they become reservoirs for important plant nutrients such as nitrogen, phosphorus, and potassium, as well as micronutrients. Cover crops also help to prevent soil erosion, reduce weed problems, and provide a habitat for beneficial insects. Working cover crops into a garden makes these nutrients available to future vegetable crops.
