Royal hits!

by Henry Tamburin

There is nothing more exciting than hitting a royal flush when you play video poker. The payout is big—$1,000 if you are a quarter player, or $4,000 for a dollar player. But royal flushes aren't so easy to hit even when you hold four to the royal and you need just one card on the draw to fill the royal. My mother- and father-in-law, however, have each hit a royal the hard way. Let me explain.

Both of my in-laws were slot players when I decided to teach them how to play video poker. They learned by playing jacks-or-better on my computer using video poker training software. It didn't take them long before they were achieving 99% playing accuracy, plus they really enjoyed playing. I also gave them video poker strategy cards so they could take them to the casino and refer to them if they were unsure on how to play a hand. At age 90 and 84, their minds were sharp as a tack and they enjoyed the challenge of playing video poker.

In the first three years after I taught them video poker, they tripled their bankroll, plus they enjoyed receiving all the casino perks just for playing: free meals, gifts and rooms. Not a bad life for two seniors with four grandchildren and four great grandchildren.

After those initial years of training, I took my father-in-law to a Mississippi casino to play, what else, some video poker. Of course, we went on a day when the casino had a promotion that multiplies your points giving us more free play and bounce back coupons (for cash) in the mail. It had been a while since my father-in-law had a royal (11 months), even though he had been dealt four to the royal on numerous occasions. But he just couldn't get the fifth card that he needed for the royal. He knew the odds of drawing the card he needed for the royal was 1 in 47, but it had eluded him for nearly a year.

Now many players get frustrated when they don't get a royal, but not my father-in-law. He knows that on average a royal will hit about once every 40,000 hands. Sometimes it takes a little longer to get that royal, while other times you might get lucky and hit 2 or 3 royals in 40,000 hands (hey, once he hit two royals the same night on the same machine). So, when my father-in-law gets into a royal flush dry spell, like he was in that year, he just keeps playing skillfully knowing that sooner or later it will come.

I was playing next to him when it happened. He hit the deal button and bingo—up popped a dealt royal flush. He didn't have to draw for a royal cause the machine dealt him one. When it happened, the machine automatically locked up and the credit meter was spinning away until it gave him the $1,150 that he won (it was a progressive video poker machine).

Now you might be wondering what the odds are of hitting a royal flush on the deal. I certainly was curious, so when I got back I did the math and discovered it was a whopping 650,000 to 1. Those are pretty long odds, but as my father-in-law proved, they are not impossible odds.

Now you might be thinking that's the end to this story, but there is more. Way back in 2005 when I first taught my mother-in-law how to play video poker, I took her to a casino in Las Vegas that had good video poker pay schedules. I stood behind her to mentor her as she played video poker for the first time. Then it happened.

She hit the deal button and up popped a five-card royal flush on her screen. Back in those days, the machine didn't lock up if you hit a royal on the deal. I knew instantly that she had just hit a royal flush, but my mother-in-law thought that she had just hit a flush. I showed her that she not only had a flush, but a royal flush, and then I hit the hold button on all five cards, followed by the draw button. The credit meter started spinning and soon she was $1,000 richer.

Now that's quite a story. I don't believe there is another husband and wife couple on this planet that has accomplished this.

So, what's the moral to this story? Don't give up when you are in a royal flush dry spell because you never know when it will hit. It could happen when you least expect it—including on the initial deal—just ask my in-laws.

Gaming News

MI casino ranks high

According to USA Today readers FireKeepers Casino Hotel in Battle Creek is No. 7 on the "Best Casinos That Aren't in Las Vegas" list for this year. FireKeepers, which has long invited guests to "Get Your Vegas On" without leaving Michigan, is the only casino in the Midwest to make the list. "We are honored to be recognized among the top casinos outside of Las Vegas," said Frank Tecumseh, CEO of FireKeepers Casino Hotel. "This achievement reflects the hard work of our team and our commitment to delivering a premier gaming and entertainment experience for our guests." FireKeepers is listed alongside casinos in New Jersey, Arizona, Mississippi, California and Connecticut.

Two Powerball winners

A recent Powerball drawing, the second largest in lottery history, yielded two winners who'll share the $1.79 billion jackpot, one in Texas, the other Missouri. They'll split the $893.5 million annuity or the $410.3 million lump sum. In Texas, you have to select the lump sum to remain anonymous; Missouri has strong regulations in place to protect winners. Both winners have 180 days to claim their jackpots.

Manhattan casino odds fade

A Times Square casino proposal backed by Caesars and Jay-Z appears to be dead in the water. A community advisory committee recently voted no on moving forward with the casino bid from SL Green Realty Corporation, Caesars Entertainment and Roc Nation and Live Nation. The group planned to convert the existing 54-story office building at 1515 Broadway, which includes the Minskoff Theatre, the longtime home of The Lion King, as well as the Viacom headquarters, into the casino. The plans called to build the casino above the Broadway theater, as well as create a luxury hotel, restaurant and entertainment spaces in the building. The recent proposal being shot down means that just one proposal for a Manhattan casino may remain in the competition among developers and casino operators to win as many as three gaming licenses in downstate New York, according to Bloomberg.com.

Big Bingo wins

Q. I know charity Bingo halls across the U.S. have varying prize payout limits, but there are other kinds of bingo halls, and I'd like to know if there have been big money winners at any of those places.

A. There have indeed been some big Bingo winners across the U.S. Here is a sampling.

Foxwoods’ Firecracker Bingo - $1M (2011)

One of the first bona fide million-dollar bingo wins in the U.S. took place at the Foxwoods Resort Casino in Connecticut. To celebrate 25 years of bingo operations, Foxwoods hosted a high-stakes “Firecracker Bingo” event on July 2, 2011, and it paid off big. Jennifer McKenzie, from Niantic, Connecticut, hit the jackpot and took home $1 million in cash. This was a landmark moment, as it proved American bingo halls could produce seven-figure winners.

Birthday millionaire at Lone Butte - $1M (2018)

‘Lucky Tara’ strikes it rich - $250,000 (2018)

Sometimes you don't need a million to make bingo history. In 2018, a player known as Tara (a Pennsylvania resident visiting New York) won $250,000 at the Seneca Gaming & Entertainment bingo hall in Salamanca, New York. This quarter-million jackpot came during the Seneca casino's 36th anniversary Million Dollar Bingo Special. Tara managed to get a coverall in 48 calls, landing the biggest bingo payout ever recorded in Western New York. She was just one ball short of the $1 million grand prize.

Record Cash Ball at Santa Fe Station - $199,578 (2025)

Las Vegas makes the list with a record-setting bingo Cash Ball jackpot. In May 2025, local player Clementine K. hit a $199,578 jackpot during the 3 p.m. bingo session at Santa Fe Station casino. This win was the largest bingo cash-ball jackpot in Station Casinos' history, according to the company. The Cash Ball is a progressive bonus in Station's bingo halls, and Clementine's nearly $200,000 prize had been building up for months before her lucky numbers came in. Her win generated plenty of excitement (and some joyful screaming) in the northwest Las Vegas Valley.

Dorothy Black’s Lucky Eagle jackpot - $133,639 (2014)

In August 2014, Dorothy Black of Olympia, Washington, made headlines by winning $133,639 at the Lucky Eagle Casino & Hotel, the largest bingo prize in that casino's history. The CEO himself presented Dorothy with an oversized check to mark the occasion. She won the jackpot playing a standard session at Lucky Eagle's bingo hall, which shows that sometimes even smaller tribal casinos can produce six-figure winners. For Dorothy, a long-time player, this amount was truly life changing. Her big win is fondly remembered in Washington's bingo community as proof that persistence and a bit of luck can lead to a record-breaking bingo haul.

ARIES (MAR 21-APR 20): A sure sign that you’re about to flip into a new attitude is when your mind starts considering dozens of different options. See if you can tether your momentum to an adventure that allows you to travel and explore some new terrain. Outside influences will take you far.

Nervous tics

Dear Guy,
I’m trying to summon up the courage to ask a friend of mine if he can do something about a really annoying habit he has of TAPPING. John (which isn’t really his name) drums his fingers on the table, taps his wedding ring against the table, or taps his dauber on the table constantly. And it’s really driving me nuts!
I know we all have our nervous quirks—my wife is always complaining that I constantly jiggle my leg at the dinner table and make the entire table move. I try to stop it but forget and do it again.
I’m curious what you think. Should I just suck it up and ignore it, say something, or do you have another idea? — Twitched, via e-mail

Dear Twitched,
Well, here’s one idea. When you see this letter in the paper, laugh about it, point it out to your friend, read it aloud to him, and then jokingly say: “Hey John, this guy sounds like you!” He’ll then probably ask what you mean, and you can innocently point out that he’s a tapper just like the guy in the paper, and that sometimes it drives you a little buggy. Just keep the whole thing light and casual. Then the next time he starts to tap, you can point it out, jokingly say, “See what I mean?” and he’ll get the message. — Guy

Veterans Post

Recent accomplishments at the VA

The VA has processed more disability claims in one year than they've ever done before. They surpassed last year's total months before the end of this fiscal year. Specifically, the backlog of veterans waiting for benefits is down over 37%.

And that's not all. In the last six months, the VA has opened 16 new health care clinics around the country. Fredericksburg and North Battlefield Clinics in Virginia, Florence Clinic in South Carolina, and 13 more.

The VA has made it easier for veterans to access community health care, cutting out the middle steps that dragged things out. Additionally, there are 30 categories of care that only require an authorization once a year.

They've identified and saved $106 million from duplicate billings caused by cases where millions of veterans were enrolled in both VA health care and Medicare. Providers were double billing, raking in the cash, and now the VA is going after that money.

Ten thousand workers have been brought back to the office, no longer able to telework. There are eligibility criteria to continue to work remotely, such as a disability or living more than 50 miles from work, but for the most part, they are back in the office.

The VA is phasing out treatment of gender dysphoria; in other words, stopping voice training, wigs, chest binders, hormone therapy and other sex change services. The saved money will instead go to helping amputees and paralyzed veterans.

Veterans at some locations say there is a shortage of physicians and other medical staff, but for the most part it looks like the VA is moving in the right direction.

The continuing adventures of Bingo Bob

Trouble upriver and at sea!

Welcome back fellow Bingo player. Last month we left Bingo John escaping with his hard-earned Bingo money. The family living on the river wanted his money. Once I hit the woods, I started runnin' like a wild man to get away. That family had nefarious plans for this old boy. Not wantin' to find out, I decided that maybe it was all right to hang out a bit and see what ole' Sarah Mae was up to. So, I headed back upriver with my tail between my legs to see if she would forgive my transgressions. But being myself, I knew I couldn't give what she was wantin': my hand in marriage.

To make life easier on everyone involved, I decided it might be best to hit the Bingo hall down the road from my regular spot. I figured she would be at her hall but might get word that I was playing down the road, and her being the jealous type might come and seek me out. Once she found me, I could string things along and keep her at an arms distance. That was the plan anyway.

As with all things in life, things get thrown your way that you never expect. I got all spiffed up and made my way to the hall, struttin' the whole way to make sure someone would mention it to Sarah Mae. At the hall I laid out all my cards and taped them down to the table. I hate when things start shufflin' around when the game gets exciting. Then I headed over to the snack bar for a tasty hot dog. This place has some real tasty dogs: red and juicy. They cook 'em by rolling the dogs on these hot metal rollers. I get the ones that are just startin' to blister. Then I spread on some ketchup and boy they just snap like a good fresh cucumber. Right when I crunched down on that dog, I see Sarah-Mae sitting at my cards like a big hen warming up her eggs. And before I know it, I bit the tip of my tongue. Sarah-Mae saw me kicking and hollering, stomping my feet like I was at the church dance meetin'. She waved at me, and I dashed into the bathroom. I opened my mouth to take a look and sure as death, my tongue was bleeding all over my pearly whites.

Now being the sort of man that I am, I didn't want to go out in public like that, so I waited and waited, and sure enough bingo started up again, and the damn thing was still bleeding. Then I heard a familiar voice yell "BINGO!" When I peeked out Sarah-Mae was waiving her arms in the air. It was my card that'd won! She saw me sticking my head out of the bathroom with a mouth full of toilet paper and pointed the caller over to me. I shook my head, so she took the winning card. Low and behold they were playin' for a free cruise: The World Bingo Cruise.

"It's him," she said, "He won the bingo cruise!"

The room erupted in cheers and she stood up and claimed the winning tickets. With terror in my heart, I saw her take the prize tickets for an all-expenses paid trip, just me and her, in one cabin no less. I tried to hide, but it was too late. The caller opened the door, and he and Sarah-Mae pulled me out and started parading me all over the stage, bloody mouth and all.

I didn't play Bingo until it was time for the cruise. I made myself sparse by hittin' the river or goin' fishing. When the day finally arrived, I showed up just before the ship was leaving port. Once I got to the room, she was standing there with a grin on her lips like she just seen the biggest hot fudge sundae of her life. She'd erected a row of suitcases and boxes across the middle of the room.

“That’s your side and this here is my side. The bathroom is mine. Up on deck they got an outdoor shower you can use. Don’t even THINK we’re gonna be sharing a bathroom,” she said. Then she leaned across the bed patting the spot next to her like she wanted me to sit down.

Right then someone comes beating on the door. When I opened the door there was this young guy with an s-shaped mouth, one side up and the other pointing down. I couldn't figure out if he was happy or sad. Before I could get my thoughts together, he shoved past me.

"See this," he said pointing at a glossy brochure. "These are the kinds of Bingo halls we play at."

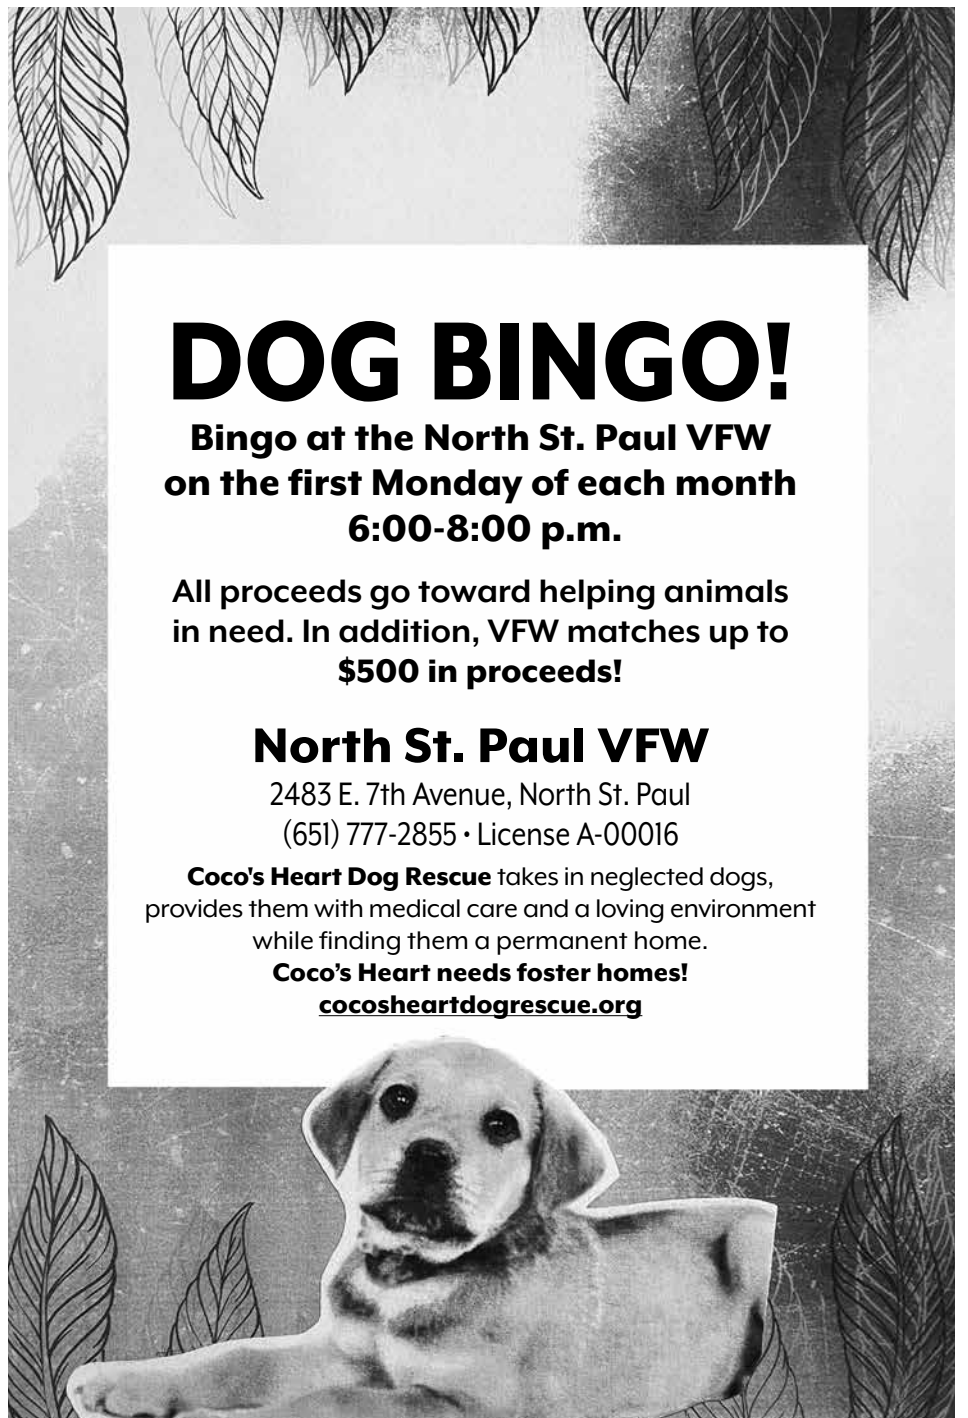

Everything was fancy and new. It looked like everything was painted in some sort of glowing paint. Even the caller looked like a movie star. All the players were fit and tanned. It was some sort of magical place that I never knew existed. When I asked where he was from, he mumbled something I couldn't quite understand. I got the feeling it was the Shangri La of bingo halls. Then he took a deep breath and said, "This is your work schedule and contract. You two need to work the Bingo Championship." Then he spun on his heels and slammed the door on his way out.

I took a look at the schedule and realized I was already late. I grabbed my stuff and headed to the main showroom. When I opened the door, everyone looked at me like I'd done something wrong.

Then this tall skinny blonde lady came rushing over and said, “You finally showed up. You get to be Fun-Ship Freddie.” She handed me a red, white, and blue costume. “Get this on. We are about to start.”

The costume was a mini version of the ship with real smoke coming out the stacks. My job was selling daubers. They were Elvis bobble head daubers. I started moving around the room, but the smoke from the twin stacks of my costume kept getting in my eyes. Then they announced that a couple of the Elvis daubers had five $100 bills under the cap. The players went wild and charged me. I could barely make my way because I could only see out of a 2-inch hole in my costume and it was filling with smoke. They were clawing at my costume and coming from all directions. I ran for the exit through smoke and gaggles of angry bingo players. But before I could get away, this old man tripped me. I went head over heels over the railing to the floor below. Last thing I remembered was floating out of my body and looking down at myself. There was Fun-Ship Freddie with smoke coming out of his head, surrounded by hundreds of bingo players who couldn't get their Elvis daubers, scrabbling like crabs fighting over a piece of chicken. But it wasn't chicken. It was me.

Next month: Bingo John wakes up, and it is a dream.

Dear Aunt Bingo

by Bonnie Mitchell

Outsiders welcome!

Dear Aunt Bingo:

We had the craziest invasion of strangers at our local Bingo hall this week. Ours is an urban church Bingo in an interesting area that is a mix of older neighborhoods on the back streets and trendy new shops, theaters, bars and restaurants on the main avenues. Some office buildings and churches are still located on these avenues as well, but they are usually dark by the time evening comes and the trendy places get going. One of the exceptions to this general rule is our Catholic church, which is used for many community events, including Bingo on Wednesday and Friday nights. The church has its own large parking lot and entrances in the back, which is how most people come and go from church activities. It's convenient because you can visit without having to elbow your way through the crowds of people on the avenues. And it's amazing how, no matter how noisy it gets outside, you never hear anything when you're in the community hall or meeting rooms. One Friday, as people were arriving at the church for Bingo, a small tour shuttle could be seen parked in the road by the parking lot. We didn't pay it much attention because buses and shuttles sometimes pass through the area. But about 20 minutes before the games were to begin, the shuttle driver and a woman who I assume was one of his passengers came into the hall and asked for the Bingo coordinator. They had a brief conversation, then left. Right after that, the coordinator went to the caller's microphone and made an announcement. She said that a tour group had arrived at one of the avenue restaurants and that the restaurant had messed up and overbooked their dining room. They had arrived after another large group had been seated and had to wait a while for their tables. They asked if they could come in and play Bingo while they waited, and the manager had said yes. Right after that, the group of about 25 well-dressed men and women came filing into the hall. We all applauded for them and made them feel welcome, and people got up and moved to different seats so that they could sit together. They stayed and played for two Bingo sessions, until word came that their seats were ready at the restaurant. Then they all packed up and headed out the door together. It was so fun and unexpected to have these out-of-town folks pop in to share an evening of Bingo with us. And it was especially nice of them not to win. — M.W., Illinois, via email

Dear M.W.:

What a welcome letter. You paint such a wonderful picture of your neighborhood with its mix of traditional old and trendy new, which sounds quite charming. It strikes me as place I might like to live. Your story was particularly interesting because, while it was kind of the Bingo coordinator and your fellow Bingo players to make the tour group feel welcome, it was equally amazing that the visitors had decided to turn lemons into lemonade by joining a church Bingo for an hour or two instead of sitting on a boring shuttle bus getting hungry and cranky. Two thumbs up to the driver and passenger for venturing into your community hall and asking if they could join you. Maybe this could become and thing across the continent to the benefit of charity bingo everywhere! — Aunt Bingo

Mushrooms are harvested year-round. The white button is the favorite variety in the U.S., with baby bellas, portabellas, oyster and shiitake also popular. Mushrooms are 90% water, and they do not need sunlight to grow.

Mushrooms double in size in one day, and one acre can produce 1 million pounds of mushrooms annually.

Savvy Senior

“You ask the senior question, we find the savvy answer!”

How to find a handyman

Dear Savvy Senior,

What’s the best way to find a good handyman or tradesman that can help with small jobs around the house? — Almost 75

Dear Almost,

It’s a great question. Finding a good home repair/handyman can be a bit of a crapshoot. How do you find someone who will return your calls or texts, show up on time, do the job right and finish it, all at a fair price? Here are a few tips and resources that can help you search.

What Kind of Help

While it may seem obvious, whom you call on for help will depend on what you need done. If, for example, you have an odd job or small home repair project that doesn’t require a lot of technical expertise, a handyperson may be all you need. But if you have a job that involves electricity, plumbing, or heating or cooling systems, you’re better off going with a licensed tradesman. Bigger jobs like home renovations or remodeling may require a general contractor.

Where to Find a Pro

Whatever type of work you need, the best way to find it is through referrals from people you trust. If your friends or family don’t have any recommendations turn to professionals in the field like local hardware or home improvement stores, or even real estate agents.

If you don’t have any luck here, there are a number of online resources you can turn to that can quickly connect you to a wide variety of skilled workers in your area.

If you need someone for a home chore or small job, a popular option is Taskrabbit, which lists thousands of freelance workers (called Taskers) that have undergone background checks. Here you can get help with things like furniture assembly; lifting or moving heavy items; mounting or hanging TVs, shelves or pictures; minor home repairs; cleaning services; yard work and more. Taskers set their own hourly rates, which are displayed on their website before you book.

Some other good options for locating handy-people are fix-it franchises like Ace Handyman and Mr. Handyman—these companies vet and insure their staff, but they may be more expensive than Taskrabbit. Or, if you use social networking sites, you could also post a request for a handyperson in your Facebook group or on Nextdoor.

If, however, you’re in the market for specialist like a plumber, electrician, painter, roofer or carpenter as well as a handyperson, try Angi.com. They too, vet their independent contractors, and will let you request quotes from several candidates. Thumbtack is another good resource that’s similar to Angi, but they offer more details like average response time, specifics about the work they do, and photos of past projects.

Things to Know

Once you’ve located a few candidates, here are some steps you can take to protect your money and ensure you’re satisfied with the results. First, get a handwritten estimate or digital contract that list the tasks and the hourly rate or project fee.

Also, ask to see their proof of insurance, which covers any damages they may cause while working on your home, and ask for several references from past jobs.

You should also pay after the work is done, not before. But it’s not unusual to be asked for a small deposit for material costs upfront.

Paw’s Corner

by Sam Mazzotta

DEAR PAWS: I read your article regarding the cat not swallowing his medications. My father taught us years ago to teach our puppies to eat wet food off a spoon. Now that the dogs are older and our vet has them on glucosamine and vitamins C and E, we put the pills with the spoonful of wet dog food and voila, they eat it! In fact they look forward to their pill time. I don’t know if the same method would work with a cat, but I would think so. — Sharon A., via e-mail

DEAR PAWS: After reading your column on getting cats to swallow pills, I wanted to share information about a product I found to be helpful

And if possible, you should pay with a credit card, because you can dispute the payment if something goes wrong with the job. Checks and electronic payments like PayPay, Venmo and Zelle don’t offer the same level of protection.

in this regard. It is called Pill Pockets, and it is available at many veterinary hospitals and most major pet stores. The product is essentially a treat with an open side to allow the pill to be put inside and then closed up by pressing in the sides. It comes in pouches of approximately 45 treats and in different flavors like salmon and chicken.

My cat loves the treat, and it allows me to give her a pill without any hassle or stress for either of us. It is also available for dogs. Please check it out. Your readers may find this product helpful. — Elaine B., Belmont, Calif.

DEAR SHARON AND ELAINE: Many thanks to both of you! I received several helpful tips from readers on giving medications to pets, from hiding the pills in food to ordering custom preparations from pharmacists. Sometimes a pet owner will have to try more than one method to see which works best, and I’m grateful to everyone for their suggestions.

Luck in poker is a matter of perspective

I recently had the opportunity to compete in the Major Series of Poker: The Tour, otherwise known as the MSPT, in their Season 16 Iowa Poker State Championship, an $1,110 buy-in no-limit hold’em poker tournament that attracted 815 entrants and awarded a $789,494 prize pool.

I ended up finishing the tournament in third place for $69,610, and along the way I experienced my fair share of good and bad luck, albeit much more of the former than the latter.

In one hand early on Day 2, which saw me bring in the second-biggest stack among the 91 returning players, it was Level 16 (4,000/8,000/8,000) when Kanat Ozturk opened for 20,000 in middle position and I looked down at the AhAs in the cutoff. There were some short stacks among the players behind me, so I opted to slow play by just calling in the hope one of them would move all in. Even if they didn’t, my hand would be well-disguised.

Unfortunately, the button and both blinds folded and it was heads-up to a flop of 2c4hAc. Ozturk continued for 15,000 and knowing he wouldn’t have raised preflop with 3x5x — which would give him a straight — I knew I had the best hand. I would usually just call, but with two clubs on the flop I didn’t want him to draw to a flush cheaply if he had two clubs in the hole.

As such, I clicked it back with a min-raise to 30,000. He called, the Kd appeared on the turn, and Ozturk checked. I bet 35,000 and he didn’t take too long to call, which made me feel he either had the flush draw or possibly pocket kings, in which case he just turned a set.

When the 7h completed the board on the river, I no longer had to worry about a flush, and then when Ozturk led out for 85,000, I was pretty sure he actually had pocket kings. I moved all in and Ozturk snap-called off his remaining 150,000 with the KsKc or so only to discover I had slow played aces.

“I thought I was trapping you,” he said before exiting the tournament in 70th place.

I was lucky to be on the right end of that cooler, which allowed me to make a deep run in the tournament. I was also lucky to go from the short stack at the final table down to the final three players, laddering up tens of thousands of dollars in the process. Unfortunately for me, that is where my luck ran out.

In my final hand, the blinds were a hefty 200,000/300,000/300,000 and I moved all in for 4.4 million holding the AcJc in the small blind. Jake Long called from the big with the Ah3h. I was a 3-to-1 favorite, and the 4s7d7h flop seemed safe enough. Unfortunately, me, the 2h turn and Kh river gave Long a runner-runner flush to end my run.

I wish I’d won that hand, which would’ve given me a good shot to win the whole thing, but I wasn’t too disappointed. Sure, I got unlucky in that hand, but I got lucky to even get there in the first place. In poker, it’s important to keep such things in perspective.

Wizard of Oz sells well

Business media and analysts are weighing in on the The Wizard of Oz and they’re all making positive noises. Bloomberg reports that Sphere is hosting upwards of 10,000 movie-goers a day and they’re paying an average of nearly $200 apiece. Add it up and Sphere is bringing in $2 million daily on ticket sales alone, plus much more for food, beverage, and merchandise. Bloomberg also reported, “Executives at Sphere estimate the film will gross hundreds of millions of dollars over the next year and could top $1 billion before concluding its run.” The success of The Wizard of Oz will likely kickstart a years-long process to adapt far more titles to the venue’s 160,000-square-foot screen.” It’s known that Sphere executives have held preliminary discussions about Harry Potter and Star Wars.

Ellis Island expansion

Ellis Island has opened up the first phase of its $35 million expansion and renovation. The project nearly doubles the size of the casino and includes a new bar and high-limit pit. There’s also a new facade out front with 1,200 square feet of LEDs, a renovated portico, and new landscaping. The bar has 25 seats and a 50- by 11-foot LED screen for sporting events.
