BLACK HISTORY MONTH

Carter G. Woodson (1875-1950) was an American historian, a scholar and the founder of the Association for the Study of Negro Life and History. Woodson was instrumental in launching Negro History Week in 1926.

A woman with dark curly hair, wearing a dark top, is speaking at a podium. A microphone is positioned in front of her. The background is a plain, light-colored wall.

“There is no American history without African American history.”
