

The Saga of the Lost Diamond Ring

April 2020

Friends:

My Lila lost the diamond from her engagement ring last fall while we were doing yard work. We figured it was gone, so we bought a new stone for her setting. Then, this afternoon, she was moving some wood near that spot and something caught her eye. When she picked it up and wiped away the mud, she had found her diamond. We're going to contact her jeweler and get her stone reset.

You may now add Minnesota to the short list of states in which diamonds have been found.

Have one made into a necklace, so she has a matched set.
