

Little Beehive, Lake Agnus Tea Hut, Big Beehive and Plains of the Six Glaciers Tea Hut.

We had a incredible day hiking in the Lake Louise area. The crowds have sure gotten larger, but the scenery has remained as iconic as ever. I will tell our story mostly use pictures. It was an incredible day, with lots of keeners who were flexible enough to add the Little and Big Beehives to the hike; they were not originally on the schedule. A word or advice; if you plan to head here, make sure to get there early because the parking lots fill up fast. We all met in the Chateau Lake Louise parking lot, then headed up the trail to the Little Beehive, dropped down to Lake Agnus Tea Hut and had lunch. Then, we went down the right hand side of the lake shore, around to the back side, and hiked up some switch backs. This took us to a saddle, where we went left to find a nice resting spot at a gazebo with a view. We back tracked 300 m and connected to the Highline Trail. From there we hiked 1.3 KM to connect with various trails that led down and over to the Plains of the Six Glaciers Tea Hut. In all it was about 17 KM.

As the day wore on, the heat certainly was more noticeable. Plains of the Six Glaciers Tea Hut; a great place to recharge. Yes, the food and drink was maybe a little pricy, but well worth the refreshing break.
