I have sent a few things out already; but, I will give it to you in paragraph form below.

Adult weeks have the normal activities scheduled like swimming, rock wall climbing, board games and the walking trail. The major activities are as follows. The first day, we are planning on taking the campers to a local water park in St. Mary's; and, it will be an all-day activity. We should be back sometime around dinner. That evening, we will have craft time and a social snack time; then, lights out.

Day two, we will saddle up the horses and right into the equestrian life where campers will have the opportunity to experience various western tack, horse anatomy and learn to ride of course on a horse!

That afternoon, we are taking them bowling in Brunswick to show them how to bowl with assistive bowling devices. And we will probably end the day with crafts and games.

Day three, we are looking at loading up the canoes and sailing on the high seas of the lake at the Laura Walker State Park. Well, maybe trying to at least float in the boat and not in the water. That afternoon, they will have the opportunity to swim in the pool and alternative activity of a treasure hunt. We will be ending that day by entering the airways on the featured activity of the week, in a hot air balloon. Campers will have the opportunity to take a couple flights in a tethered hot air balloon right on our very own grounds. I believe the campers will have something to talk about for years to come.

The last full day, brings the horses back and campers can continue their equestrian dreams and maybe even ride a horse independently by sound clues around the corral. They will have the opportunity to finalize any craft projects, enjoy a cook-out and bless us with a talent show and the handing out of awards.

Obviously, Fridays are the bitter sweet days where the fun ends, having to say goodbye to friends and bugs. Or, is it buggy friends; I think in is just the bugs. They have to go back sleeping in a comfortable bed; and, watching reruns of the Andy Griffith Show. Well, the Andy Griffith show might be pretty good!

All adult weeks are scheduled to be the same barring rain.

Well, we the camp staff will say goodbye to the adults and let the k5 through 12 year old's teach us a few thing or two in the next week.

K5 – 12

The little ones are going to share the rules with us, show us how to jump on the blow-up castle, and look for hidden treasures for prizes. They may let us read to them before they go to bed. And they are going to do that all in the first full day; I hope they stop for the meals we have planned for them. I am sure they will be ready for bed that night.

The second day, they are going to show us all about horses and their equipment, show us how to swim by example and find the best hidden treasure..

The third full day is filled with them competing with us in out-door sports. They are going to look down on us from the top of the rock wall; and, teach us how to swim again, Then they will make us a rain stick.

The last full day will consist of the horse activities, swimming again and end with crafts.

Friday of that week will be a sad day for the staff because we will be on our own then and put what we have learned to practice with the following Teen week.

Teen Week:

The first full day will have the teens in the water; or, the water will be in them, until they go to bed.

The second full day has them working with the horses and petting zoo. They also are scheduled to go swimming and a treasure hunt with prizes.

On day three, they are going to try their hand at the rock climbing wall, water balloon volleyball, crafts and end the day with a hay ride.

The fourth full day has them working with the horses again. They will jump back into the pool for a little while and then try to put out the counselor's fires with a bucket Brigade race. The day will end with a cook out, awards and a talent show.

Let me know if you need something else?

Schedule:

I am continuing to work on the various events at what time for each week of camp. For the adult camp weeks, I have a water park, bowling, tandem cycling, and an advance horseback riding program as the major events. We will still be swimming, wall climbing and all sorts of games and other challenges to fill in the rest of the schedule.

During Family camp week, I have three professionals coming in the area of Orientation and Mobility, Certified Vision Rehab Therapist, a TVI from the state of Georgia and a Technology specialist in the area of Adaptive Technology. I am also looking at bringing in a jumping balloon rides, a petting zoo and treasure hunt with prizes for the young kids.
