

Allstones Lake Report

August 16, 2015

Allstones Lake was my first hike with the club. We hiked 14kms with 550m elevation in a group of five people. We started around 9:15am and finished at 3:10pm. The type of the hike was moderate, so there were up hills which made the hike a little difficult for me at the beginning; however the amount of breaks we had made it much easier for me. Also, the group sometimes let me go first and continued with my speed.

The weather was rainy almost all the way going up. During the time going up there was not clear view of the mountains because they were all covered with clouds. So, the group decided to skip the last hour of the hike since it was so foggy. While having lunch it became sunny and we got a beautiful view of the nature on our way down! Even though we did not get to do the full hike, it was an awesome day with a great group of people.
