

Adolescents exist in vast holding patterns, circling endlessly but seldom permitted to land on issues that are important to them....they often develop feelings of incapacity... and negative goals. Most conventional school curricula do little to assuage, nor understand the dimensions of this adolescent alienation.

James Mackey, 1978