American Legion Post #543 Nominates the St. James Service Club Which Wins Award Helping Children

The St. James Service Club was recently awarded the Children and Youth Service Organization of The Year from the Department of North Carolina American Legion. This award is given to an organization which best demonstrates extraordinary support to the youth of a particular community. Over 300 American Legion posts throughout the state of North Carolina are invited to submit their entries for this prestigious award. Presenting the award, on behalf of the Commander of the Department of North Carolina, David Shore, were the current and past commanders of American Legion Post #543, Gary Crowden and Rick Sessa. Accepting this award were the current and past presidents of the St. James Service Club, Barbara Bliss and Stephanie Macaluso.
