

Colleen S. Myers

Thoughtful Sexy Fun

Colleen S. Myers was raised in a large catholic family in the outskirts of Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania where she grew up on Harlequin teen romances and stories from her mother's days as a paramedic. She went on to attend Allegheny College majoring in Biology and English.

After college, Colleen spent a year in service in the Americorp giving back to the community at a local Pittsburgh Women Infants and Children Clinic (WICC) before attending Kirksville College of Osteopathic Medicine on a military scholarship.

Upon completing medical school, Colleen attended residency at Andrews Air Force Base in Maryland and was on base in Washington, DC during 9/11. She earned three meritorious service awards from the military. After serving seven years of active duty, she promptly landed a position at the VA to provide fellow veterans with optimum medical care.

Still an avid fan of romances into adulthood, her love of the genre inspired her to hone her craft as a writer, focusing on contemporary romance and science fiction. Her background in medicine and the military provides an inspiring layer of creative realism to her stories and characters.

Her book, Must Remember, the first in the Solum series, is published by Champagne Press. The sequel, Can't Forget is the recipient of the 2015 RWA New England Readers Award. Distant Memory will be published in 2016.

Colleen currently resides with her family in Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania and spends her spare time writing novels.

Visit www.colleensmyers.com

Connect with Colleen

www.facebook.com/ColleenSMyers

twitter.com/ColleenSMyers

www.pinterest.com/csmyers3637/

plus.google.com/114862374558510360435/posts

www.goodreads.com/author/show/14553363.Colleen_S_Myers