

The New York Times

It's solidarity in times of social distancing. People are coming together, donating medical supplies, sewing face masks, checking on their neighbors, clapping for their service workers, and proving that we're not alone even when we're isolated.

