JCNCF Highlights Our Israel Support
With ‘Lone Soldier’ Events On Feb. 2

What would motivate a young person to leave family and friends, home and country, to enlist in the armed services of another nation? That question is at the heart of two special events sponsored by the Jewish Council of North Central Florida on Sunday, February 2.

At 10 a.m., JCNCF donors are invited to the home of Dr. Ken Wald and Dr. Robin West where they will enjoy brunch and a talk by Ralph Lowenstein and Scott Tankel, both of whom volunteered for the Israel Defense Forces (IDF); Lowenstein in 1948 and Tankel in 2008. At 1 p.m. that same day, the talk will be offered to the general community at a program hosted at Temple Shir Shalom.

Through the Annual Campaign, JCNCF donations support many causes locally and globally, including the Jewish Agency For Israel (JAFI) which sponsors the Fund for Lone Immigrant Soldiers - young men and women who enlist in the IDF without family or friends in country.

Each year, hundreds of “lone soldiers” bravely put their lives on the line to ensure a strong, safe Israel for Jews around the world. Standing on the threshold of adulthood, these young men and women have left family, friends and comfortable lives behind to make aliya and serve in the Israel Defense Forces.

Though they must struggle to make ends meet and are often still in the process of acclimating to a new culture and language, Israel’s lone soldiers serve their chosen homeland with commitment and purpose. Thousands of miles away from their families, they must find their own apartments and pay for rent, utilities, food, transportation, and other personal expenses. Dreams, Dedications: An Adult Bat Mitzvah Reflects

By Virginia Brissette

I started thinking about having a Bat Mitzvah when I converted to Judaism in December 2008. I felt very drawn to Torah study and to learning Hebrew, but for a variety of reasons, it wasn’t something I was ready to immediately pursue at that time and so I tucked the idea away as something I would do … eventually.

The news coverage and excitement about the “once in a lifetime” confluence of Thanksgiving and Chanukah in 2013 started early. Early enough for me to pull out my calendar and to look closely at the Torah portion for that week and to connect that this was the same Torah portion of the Shab-
Temple Shir Shalom’s year-long program theme on Life’s Transitions in a Jewish Key will continue with two important programs in January 2014.

First up on January 12 is a brunch gathering of students, parents, and grandparents for a discussion of Jewish views about the obligations of teaching and rearing children toward young adulthood.

What do adults need to teach, and what should they expect children to learn on their own? Why do parents insist on making certain choices for their children, but not others?

During the course of the program, students and adults will separate for a few minutes to talk about these questions, then come back together to compare notes, and, if necessary, to debate.

On Friday, January 17, Rabbi Michael Joseph will speak about Torah portion Yitro in the light of the Jewish transitions theme. Though Yitro is highlighted by the text of the Ten Commandments, it also includes very emotional and evocative verses concerning Moses’ adult relationship with his wife, his children, and his in-laws.

At the height of Moses’ career, he seems to lack the kind of balance between work and family that we would want for ourselves. What can we learn from his example?

This series of programs at Temple Shir Shalom is open to the public (including brunch at Sunday School), and is supported by a grant from the Jewish Council of North Central Florida.
B’nai Israel Foyer Renovation Is Complete

A much anticipated renovation of the B’nai Israel foyer has been completed and congregants could not be happier about the change. Adding an additional 259 square feet of space, the new foyer provides a wonderful welcoming area for those visiting B’nai for services and programs. Contributions from congregants made this renovation a reality and the efforts of a dedicated committee worked to ensure the space would be welcoming and inviting.

“I am most pleased with the new handicapped accessible restrooms that are part of this renovation,” said committee chair Gilda Josephson. “Our committee prioritized making our building more comfortable and inviting for all of our members and guests.

“Synagogue member Andy Kaplan was instrumental in designing this beautiful expansion and we appreciate the excellent job done by Joyner Construction,” she said. “We are looking forward to utilizing this wonderful new space for many years to come!”

Thank you to everyone who made this renovation happen. We are thrilled with the end result and welcome you to visit.

Correction

An article in the December Chronicle incorrectly stated that the Temple Shir Shalom gift shop would be closing immediately following the Chanukah season.

While plans are for the gift show to close, the exact closing date has not been set, but will most likely be before summer.

The Chronicle regrets this error.

Rabbi Kaiman Visits White House To End Violence Against Women, Girls, LGBT People

Congregation B'nai Israel Rabbi David Kaiman was among 30 Jewish leaders and rabbis from across the nation who met with White House officials to learn about the administration’s strategy to end violence against women, girls and LGBT people.

The White House visit was arranged by American Jewish World Service (AJWS). The delegation urged administration officials to continue working to ensure that women, girls and LGBT people are on the forefront of the United States' foreign policy agenda. This effort is part of AJWS’s new national advocacy campaign, We Believe. AJWS is the leading Jewish international development and human rights organization working to end poverty and realize human rights in the developing world.

While at the White House, the delegation met with Jamille Bigio, White House Director for Human Rights and Gender, National Security Staff; Avra Siegel, Deputy Director of the White House Council on Women and Girls; Matt Nosanchuk, White House Jewish Liaison; Gautam Raghuvan, White House Public Engagement Advisor; and Melissa Rogers, Special Assistant to the President and Executive Director of the White House Office of Faith-based and Neighborhood Partnerships.

“Around the world, women, girls and LGBT people are abused, assaulted and beaten, and our government must act decisively to help end this epidemic of violence,” said Timi Gerson, director of advocacy for AJWS, who was part of the delegation. “We were pleased to have the opportunity to learn about the administration’s strategy to end violence against women, girls and LGBT people and to discuss how we can work with the administration through our new We

The Hard Work of Freedom

By Rabbi Beri Goldman
Lubavitch-Chabad
Jewish Student and Community Center at the University of Florida

This past month, the world lost a great human being. Leaders and representatives from almost every country went to pay their last respects to Nelson Mandela, a man who changed the face of South Africa and taught everlasting lessons to humanity about freedom, equality and the preciousness of each person.

Nelson Mandela, like many other great leaders throughout history, so believed in what he stood for that he went to jail several times for many years, for his ideals. After years of suffering, Nelson Mandela life's struggle bore fruits when apartheid was abolished in 1991.

He would later become the first democratically elected president of South Africa, as well as the Noble Prize winner in 1994. His life will continue to serve as an inspiration to us all.

The current Torah portions that are read in synagogues around the world are from the book of Shemos, Exodus. After Joseph died, the Pharoh cruelly enslaved the Jewish people. They were treated inhumanly, beaten and forced to work under terrible conditions, which brought them to the edge of despair. At the peak of their slavery and darkness, G-d interceded and instructed Moses to serve as His representative to bring about the Ten Plagues, and then ultimately as G-d's messenger, he brought the Israelites out of Egypt and to their freedom.

Our sages tell us that until then not even one person was able to escape Egypt, yet on the day of the Exodus, two million people walked to their freedom in the light of day.

Each day at the end of our prayer services in the ‘Six Remembrances’ we recall the Exodus from Egypt. The Talmud states, "In every generation one must look upon himself as if he personally had gone out of Egypt." The Lubavitcher Rebbe of righteous memory explains this verse as follows: The Exodus from Egypt was not a one-time occurrence.

It is a recurring event in each of our lives. We are each restricted by personal obstacles, whether emotional, physical or spiritual, that hinder various aspects of our growth. The Hebrew word for Egypt is Mitzrayim, from the same root word as Meitzarim, limitations. The current ‘Egypt’ that we must leave is a state of mind.

We each have a soul, a part of G-d within us, and by freeing ourselves, we come in touch with our G-dly side, making room for others in our lives. Nelson Mandela said, “For to be free is not merely to cast off one's chains, but to live in a way that respects and enhances the freedom of others.” When we remove obstacles that hinder us and free our minds and psyches of useless clutter that bogs us down, we not only enable ourselves to be more successful and productive, we are also able to assist those around us. It is a basic tenant in Judaism that human beings are responsible for the welfare of each other. When we are free of our own demons, we are open to helping others live freely.

The Torah guides us how to live truly free. The struggle of self-liberation is a constant one and we are each faced with continuous challenges both from within and without. But, with the guidance of a Higher authority and with hard work, freedom becomes something precious, with which one can achieve tremendous results for himself and for those around him, and with ripple effects the freedom will spread to the rest of the world.

As the final month of construction for the new Center for Jewish Life and Learning is upon us, Chanie, our family and I would like to thank all those who have already pledged and dedicated to the new building. With deep appreciation to our partners, our friends, for your love, trust and encouragement. Thank you for your support.

bat when I converted. That it just so happened to be the five year anniversary of my conversion and this “once in lifetime” Chanukah made the date too good to resist. I knew that this was going to be the Shabbat that I read from the Torah for the first time and I was both excited and nervous.

I dove into learning the parsha Miketz with great enthusiasm. As one of the portions that is part of the narrative of Joseph the Righteous, who rises from the status of prisoner to be the right hand man of the pharaoh, Miketz offers so many ideas for reflection and discussion. I chose to organize my comments into three specific areas that I thought reflected the main themes, or as I identified them - blessings, from the parsha, but that also represented my journey from a stranger to a leader in this Jewish community.

Joseph’s first blessing was his understanding of the hidden messages in dreams. He had a gift for being able to see meaning in dreams and to set in motion events that would lead to those dreams being brought to fruition. Perhaps Joseph was just at the right place at the right time, but not everyone possesses the kind of “holy chutzpah” that he did and he saw opportunity and took action.

Perhaps, I too have been in the right place at the right time, but I like to think that I have also been incredibly fortunate to have crossed paths with enough visionaries – people who saw potential in me and believed in my skills - that I have been able to progress in my work in the Jewish community from a volunteer religious school teacher to a mitzvah project coordinator to my current position as the Executive Director of the Jewish Council of North Central Florida. I am aware that in a community as small as ours, there are limited number of opportunities for individuals to make a living doing Jewish work and I feel very blessed that I have been able to make one of my dreams come true right here in Gainesville.

Joseph’s second blessing was his dedication to achieving his goals. During the seven good harvest years, Joseph created a system of rationing wheat that would ensure a steady (Continued on page 11) nominal stipend new immigrants are eligible for is not enough to cover these expenses.

The Jewish Agency Fund for Lone Immigrant Soldiers, established in partnership with the IDF and the Ministry of Absorption, was created to answer the urgent and immediate economic needs of these soldiers and to ensure them a dignified standard of living.

All monies raised for the Fund go directly to the soldiers themselves to help them buy basic electrical appliances, cover the cost of living expenses and other needs including calling cards to stay in touch with loved ones abroad.

In addition to financial assistance, the Fund matches lone soldiers with veteran Israeli families through the Jewish Agency’s At Home Together program. Soldiers are adopted by Israeli families who provide them with critical emotional and social support and help them acculturate to their new environment.

Through the Fund, lone soldiers also participate in a course designed to prepare them for transition to civilian life. Prior to their discharge, soldiers receive guidance and information about academic and employment opportunities and help in the process of joining mainstream Israeli society.

The Fund for Lone Immigrant Soldiers is one of many programs that the JCNCF supports with donations from the area Jewish community. For more information please contact Executive Director Virginia Brissette at 352.371.3846 or virginia@jcncf.org.

Chabad of Marion County Brings Jewish Identity Course To North Central Florida

To Be a Jew in the Free World: Jewish Identity Through the Lens of Modern History is a new six-week course coming to Ocala & The Villages. The program is sponsored locally by the Chabad Jewish Center of Marion County.

The course was created by the Rohr Jewish Learning Institute and is being offered in locations in Florida and nationwide. Interested participants can sign up at www.myjli.com.

Course Overview

What was it like for our ancestors to say goodbye to the shtetl, to set out to discover new lives for themselves, along with all of the liberties the free world had to offer? At the dawn of the enlightenment, how did our parents adapt their Judaism to the developments of a modern age? And what can we learn from their struggles to connect deeply with our own Jewish identities?

This new course will give you the opportunity to make sense of your personal Jewishness; it will help you overcome perceived incompatibilities between Judaism and modern society; and it will provide you with the clarity and conviction to pass on a legacy of Jewish pride to the next generation.

There will be two series of courses in the Marion County Area. Sundays beginning Feb. 2 at Chabad of Marion County, 3509 SW 34th Avenue Cir, Ocala. Breakfast is at 10 a.m. with the class sessions from 10:30 a.m. to noon.

Another series begins Feb. 4 at the Lady Lake Library, 225 W Guava St, Ocala. Classes from 11:30 a.m. to 12:45 p.m.

Cost of the course is $85 which includes textbooks or $12 per class (textbooks not included).

Lesson Outline:

Once A Jew, Forever A Jew

Napoleon Bonaparte promised freedom from discrimination. The price? Allegiance to him and to France. Why are alternative allegiances a cause of concern for Jews? Just how deep does our Jewish identity run? And why is it that no matter what you do, you'll always be a Jew?

Freedom For All

In 1790, after leading a revolution in the name of liberty, George Washington affirmed the divine and inviolable freedoms of America's tiny Jewish community. What is freedom? Is it indeed liberating to do as we please? Perhaps freedom is about something much deeper, more meaningful, and fulfilling!

supply of food during the predicted years of famine that would follow. He worked hard to make sure that people would be able to eat during the good time as well as, the lean times that would inevitably come. I have also been blessed to do the work that I do with people who are so incredibly dedicated.

From my Jewish communal colleagues, to the board members, to all the volunteers who share the responsibility of nurturing our Jewish community, I am grateful for their incredible work ethic and determination to not only sustain what we have built, but to pass it on to the next generation better than we found it.

Joseph's third blessing was his compassionate teaching. As an influential man in pharaoh's court, he could have easily sought to punish his brothers when they came to him for food. Instead, he chose to teach them a powerful lesson. He did not immediately forgive them for their actions against him, but he got his message across by teaching them, not just punishing them, and sometimes, a lesson must come with a measure of compassion in order to be effective and to create real and meaningful change.

Again, the parallels for me are profound. I have learned so much and made many mistakes in my time learning “how to be Jewish,” but with the compassionate teachers who have surrounded me, I have had the support, encouragement and love of those who have the vision to see the dream and who are willing to work to make it happen.

I was a “stranger” when I arrived in Gainesville in 2006 and today in 2014, as a newly minted “Bat Mitzvah,” I feel more connected to this community than anywhere else I have lived. My life and career path, which were lacking spiritual meaning before, now have a very clear purpose and I wake up every day grateful and excited that I am doing what I do – creating and sustaining our Jewish community.

Thank you to everyone who has shared this journey with me. I cherish our dreams, admire our dedication and look forward to always learning with you.
