

Night of the iguana

Chuck Smith, president of the Randolph County Animal Shelter, is often called and asked to remove wild things like snakes from people's homes. On occasion he will remove non-poisonous snakes.

Recently he was called about a big lizard in Wedowee. It was close to an outside air conditioner in cold weather and appeared to be dead. Smith took it to the shelter and put a light on it. It returned to life. It turned out to be an iguana. They need to find a home for this unusual guest that is taking up space at the shelter that could be used for a dog, he said.

"Let's find this girl a home," he said. "Lizzy is 23" long and beautiful!" he said. If you are interested contact Smith at 256-282-8171.
