About the County

Clark County is located in the southwestern part of the U.S. state of Washington. As of the 2021 census, the population was 511,404. Its county seat and largest city is Vancouver. It was the first county to be established in Washington, named after William Clark of the Lewis and Clark Expedition. Clark County is surrounded on two sides by the Columbia River and on the north by the North Fork of the Lewis River. Mount Hood, Mount Saint Helens and Mount Adams are all visible from Clark County, and cold winter winds through the Columbia River Gorge often bring freezing rain and a coating of glaze ice or clear ice known locally as a "silver thaw," especially in southeastern areas of the county closest to the gorge. The counterpart to this are warm winds from the southwest known locally as the "Pineapple Express".
