About the Professor

The PNWGS is honored to welcome Amit Singal, M.D., M.S., Professor in the Department of Internal Medicine at UT Southwestern Medical Center. He specializes in treating patients with liver cancer and other liver diseases. He is a Dedman Family Scholar in Clinical Care and the David Bruton Jr. Professor in Clinical Cancer Research.

Dr. Singal earned his medical degree at the University of Michigan. He completed a residency in internal medicine at the University of Washington and then received advanced training in gastroenterology and transplant hepatology through separate fellowships at the University of Michigan. He also holds master’s degrees in health and health care research and in clinical science with distinction from the University of Michigan. Certified by the American Board of Internal Medicine in gastroenterology and transplant hepatology, he joined the UT Southwestern faculty in 2010.

Dr. Singal’s research focuses on diagnosing and treating liver cancer before it becomes incurable. He has received numerous grants, including from the National Institutes of Health (NIH), CPRIT, and the Department of Defense, and he lectures on his work frequently throughout the world.

He has published more than 200 articles in many peer-reviewed publications, such as JAMA, Gastroenterology, Hepatology, Journal of Hepatology, and GUT. In addition, he is an associate editor for both Clinical Gastroenterology and Hepatology and Seminars in Liver Disease.
