

A note from Ken, February 24, 2017

Friends, I haven't been writing much lately. I'm something of a person whose pen is powered by emotion. There have been some moments, but between dealing with some inside-the-family logistics I just haven't allowed myself to step outside my shell. Wednesday, though, something fairly powerful happened and I'll be sharing it in a few days. Still trying to pull together some words about my Mousse and about an unfortunate encounter from a recent social event. The first broke my heart, and the second terrified me. I need to get them out, though, and so I'll be letting the offspring take care of their own problems for a few days.

And some replies from just a few of his friends

Dear Ken,
Even your not writing much is still good writing.

Hi Ken,
Hoping all is well! Or will be soon
