

Imagination vs. Fantasy

Imagination concerns
the possible;
fantasy concocts
the impossible.

Imagination deals
with the real;
fantasy is found
on a reel.

Imagination dreams up
alternatives;
fantasy just dreams.

Imagination offers
images;
fantasy produces
mirages.

Fantasy is
a diversion;
imagination
can cause
a conversion.

Fantasy lives
in its own world;
imagination copes
with this world.

When your projects
are built on fantasy,
expect failure.

If your plans
are born of imagination,
look for adventure.

Facing a formidable wall,
fantasy
will try to fly on wings
that don't exist;
imagination
will start to dig with hands
we do possess.

We're disappointed when we're grasping and greedy-- blame fantasy.
We are fulfilled by
sharing and caring—
credit imagination.

When life, therefore,
comes to an impasse,
pass up fantasy
and use imagination.
For, imagination suggests
another exit,
but fantasy is locked into pure escapism.

© Msgr. Walter Niebrzydowski
December 30, 1990
Fr-Walter@nyc.rr.com
www.fatherwaltersparish.org