SKIING AT SNOWMASS

For 2020-'21, Snowmass continues to see the majority of improvements, including an upgraded Big Burn chairlift and a redesigned Gwynn's restaurant at the top of Alpine Springs. There will also be improved snowmaking in the Alpine Springs area, but the bigger news is that Aspen Mountain will see top-to-bottom, high-efficiency snowmaking. The result? No more downloading on the Silver Queen Gondola during lean early seasons. "Been there many times and never been disappointed," says one reader, summing it up nicely. "The standard that I always measure other resorts against." — Jon Jay www.skimag.com 2021

SKIING AT ASPEN

There is no denying the unique personality of Aspen Mountain. Rising from the vibrant heart of downtown Aspen, this is where it all began in 1946 with the single-seat Lift 1, which immediately became the longest chairlift in the world. That mentality of "go big or go home" has always been at the foundation of the mountain they still call "Ajax."

Skiing at Aspen Highlands

Highland Bowl is the best,” says one reader. “It makes everything all right in the world.” Speaking of challenge (No. 4), Highlands also offers plenty of lift-served steep and deep, including the heart-skipping fall lines of Steeplechase, secret stashes in Oly Bowl, and the snow-magnet glades of Deep Temerity. But “badass” doesn’t paint the full picture. Highlands’ at-times under-appreciated variety (No. 6) includes great learning bumps, long, wide power-turn cruisers, and meticulously groomed beginner runs. A chill local vibe and lack of crowds contribute to its character (No. 6), and while there’s “not much going on at Highlands” compared to other base areas. Skimag.com 2021

Skiing

The skiable terrain at Buttermilk Ski Resort is only 470 acres (190 hectares); providing 44 trails across a vertical drop of 2,030 ft (619 metres). The 3 main chair lifts service the entire ski hill and are fast quad chairs, and there is one small lift and a magic carpet for novices.

Buttermilk is largely a tame ski resort with wide tree-lined groomed runs. The terrain stats are 35% green, 39% blue, 25% black, and 5% double black trails. In reality most of the blue runs are appropriate for confident beginners, and the black runs would be categorised as blue (or double blue) slopes at other ski resorts. Powderhounds.com 2021
