Ray has been a long-time advocate for the preservation of Mount Clemens and has been active in Macomb County's historic community for years. Ray also loves to promote Macomb's natural resources. He spent many years practicing law in an office located in Mount Clemens and became an authority and Subject Matter Expert (SME) for the history of the Mount Clemens area. His law office walls are still covered in photos of historic Mount Clemens, all of which were placed there by Ray.

As a founding member of the Macomb County Historical Commissioners, Ray was honored when he was elected as the commission's first president, a position he held for a number of years. Having accomplished so much, some of the highlights of his years of volunteerism include:

- Playing an active role in the development of Tomlinson Arboretum, a 24-acre parcel of land located across the street from the Clinton Township Civic Center Park and Historic Village. This lovely location was developed through grants and donations and features a walking / bike path that winds through hundreds of native trees and plants that were cultivated in the space.
- Ray helped to coordinate the re-creation, installation and rededication of Parrot Civil War Cannons that now sit in front of the Macomb County Building in Downtown Mt. Clemens.
- Has been a member of the Greater Clinton Township Historical Society since its inception and has been involved in many of their activities including the development of the township's historic village.
