

Mission Update—Final Post 8-10-18

Chuck here again. A really productive day today, the roof is done, Yay! We are still removing bad studs and have almost finished the flooring. We removed the mantel this morning and found more damage.

Last night on the trail. Oops, wrong activity, that's Boy Scouts. Last night with the Mission Team in Fayetteville, NC. This was our coolest day so far — it was only 93, but at least the heat index wasn't above 100 today. I think we were all thankful for the cooler temperature, including me because I had to wear the protective suit removing old installation, and cutting and installing the new. Then helped to install flooring. I am glad Chuck was still here because I needed adult supervision to figure out how to install and cut out for the vent and not have all the seams marry up. I think we all learned some new skills today, especially me. Hopefully, we will finish our tasks early tomorrow so we can get an early start home. See you this weekend.

Dean

REMOVING OLD WALLS

REMOVING OLD FLOORING

Moving plywood that will become part of the new subfloor.