Food Plot – Assess your Food Plot Crops

During the winter month's write down what you did in your food plot(s), if you haven't already done so. Be sure to include what you planted, when and how much per acre. Document what you used for fertilizer and how much was applied. Now, assess each crop you grew: 1) Did the crop(s) produce well for you? If so, document all that went well. If not, are you able to identify what went wrong? If so, create a plan for next year, factoring in what you have learned. If you do not feel that everything went well and you are unable to determine what went wrong, stop in and show us your assessment; we may be able to give insight for future plans.

Basically, make yourself a pros and cons list. From that list you should be able to identify points of learning and establish a better plan for 2021. As always, Hohl's Farm Supply has knowledgeable staff and extensive resources to assist you in creating that envious food plot.
