

Mystery vs. Mystification

Mystery beckons;
mystification beguiles.

Mystery reveals;
mystification conceals.

Mystery attracts;
mystification distracts.

Mystery invites us
to look;
mystification prevents us
from seeing.

Mystery is akin
to profundity;
mystification is allied
with obfuscation.

Mystery approaches
and withdraws;
mystification hovers
and lingers.

Mystery is above
the cloud;
mystification
is the cloud!

Mystery has too much
to comprehend;
mystification is mere incomprehension.

We can manipulate
mystification,
but never control
mystery.

We grow by pursuing
mystery,
but eschewing
mystification.

God is mystery,
but a lot of God-talk
is mystification.

We should be enraptured
by mystery,
and not wrapped
in mystification.

Our hearts were made
for mystery:
so never settle
for mystification.

© Msgr. Walter Niebrzydowski

August 16, 1992

Fr-Walter@nyc.rr.com

www.fatherwaltersparish.org