Trick or Treat and 'Belsnickel'

"Halloween is right around the corner. You can tell because all the stores are decked out for Christmas."
— Ms. Anonymous

by N.L. Preston

October is the month of Boo! I scared you. In other words, it's when ghosts, goblins, and monsters of various varieties roam our streets and bang on doors begging for candy. Imagine if instead of saying trick-or-treat, kids rang doorbells and shouted, Belsnickel! Belsnickel was an old German-American tradition in which children dressed in costumes and visited neighbors at Christmas, not Halloween. If neighbors couldn't guess who was behind each mask, the penalty was paid with sweet treats. Well, that sounds mighty familiar, don't you think?

And speaking of treats PSLs, Pumpkin Spice Lattes, have arrived as they do every year at this time. They were first named Fall Harvest Lattes, but their creator, Peter Dukes, switched the name to the company code PSL; the initials baristas were writing on customer cups. Since we're not all fans of PSLs, how do you feel about pumpkin seeds, a so-called superfood? One recipe recommends after you're done with your pumpkin, soak its seeds to remove pulp; add spices, then roast the seeds on a cookie sheet on top oven rack for 15/20 minutes at 350 degrees. The American Heart Association claims these babies contain 5.2 grams fiber/serving as opposed to those from shelled, store-bought ones. A quarter cup of these seeds provides 42% of recommended daily magnesium intake to stay heart and bone healthy, lower blood pressure, and prevent migraines; not bad for a tiny tasty seed.

Personally, I love October not for its PSLs, or certainly not trick or treaters, but for its colorful fall foliage and cooler weather. In my home state, I can travel not far in any direction and see an array of God's leafy handiwork; masterpieces in motion as the colors deepen and the leaves drop gracefully from the trees. In Vermont, this is Leaf-Peeping, a term first seen in print in a Vermont newspaper in 1966. Apparently, the locals were grumbling that out-of-towners were causing traffic jams and had retaliated with signs reading Tourists Go Home on their cars; so much for small town hospitality!

One last thing about this month of October is that its last day is referred to as All Hallow's Eve, an offshoot of the ancient festival of Samhain. This pagan religious celebration honored the summer harvest when people would light bonfires while wearing costumes to ward off ghosts. Truth be told, if you believe in ghosts, you are not alone. One poll revealed that four out of 10 Americans do believe in ghosts, demons, and other supernatural entities. Not to worry though. All you need do to ward off evil spirits is to ring bells loudly on October 31st. Easy-peasy. On the other hand, if you want to summon ghosts, you should visit New Orleans or Salem, Massachusetts. These locations are supposedly haunted to the max. For scary fun, sign up for the ghost tours that are readily available. Robert and I did and thoroughly enjoyed hearing supposedly true ghost stories—while watching out for any apparitions that might be peeping over our shoulders. It didn't happen, just like when I need one number to bingo and it hides in the bottom of the bingo hopper taunting me until the game is over. Until next month, may Lady Luck blow you kisses as you dance out the door with dollars. Win big.

Gaming News

Illegal online gambling dwarfs legal

The market intelligence firm Yield Sec issued a summary of legal and illegal online gambling in the U.S. and reported that in 2024, "unlicensed offshore gambling platforms accounted for a staggering 74 percent of the United States' total online gross gambling revenue of $90.1 billion. That means nearly three-quarters of all online gambling dollars are flowing through illegal channels." Out of the total $90 billion, $67.1 billion in revenue went to illegal operators and $23 billion to legal. Yield Sec also lists 917 illegal platforms, compared to 95 licensed, with 668 affiliate sites, compared to just over 100 legal affiliates. And the illegal sector grew by nearly 65% in 2024 compared to 26% growth for the legal. The report concludes, "Most betting now happens on mobile devices and new features like live dealer games are catching on quickly. Younger tech-savvy players are looking for fast easy access and exciting new experiences."

New Ocean's movie

Hollywood scuttlebutt has it that another in the Ocean's franchise of movies is in the works. Apparently, it's a prequel to the current crop of Las Vegas heist flicks, but that's about all that's known, other than filmmaker Lee Isaac Chung was at press time "in talks" to direct. Chung was an Academy Award nominee for his 2020 film Minari—about a Korean American family that moves to a tiny Arkansas farm in search of their own American dream.

Bingo and poker capital

After being named the bingo capital of the U.S., Montana has added poker king to its gambling-related resume. Following up on the bingo study, gambling.com applied a similar analysis to poker and cited Montana's 2.11 poker rooms per 100,000 residents as tops in the country. Nevada was second at 1.13. Texas has the most poker rooms with 84 but finished ninth in the per-capita ranking. California with 60 poker rooms was 15th on the list. One thing is certain: They like to gamble in Montana.

Record year so far

For the first half of 2025, gross gaming revenue (GGR) in the U.S. from commercial casinos added up to $38.4 billion, up from $35.7 billion in the first six months of 2024. Sports GGR year to date was $7.1 billion and igaming $4.7 billion; combined, remote gambling accounted for a full 30% of the total. This year is on track to set a record for GGR.

The venue embodies sophistication and fun in equal measure. As part of Suncoast’s ongoing renovation efforts, the new 9,170 square-foot Bingo Room features a modern coastal aesthetic theme along with a massive 17-foot bouncing bingo ball chandelier. The 406-seat room also features a snack bar and a glass-enclosed smoking area with its own ventilation system. The Bingo Room is open daily from 10:30 a.m. to 10 p.m. The opening of the Bingo Room is a continuation of work that began in late 2023, when Boyd Gaming launched a complete transformation of the Suncoast beginning with the debuts of an all-new High Limit Room and William B’s Steakhouse. Renovations have continued and include a revamped sportsbook and casino floor spaces. Future plans include the remodel of guest favorite Du-Pars, a modernized bowling center, expanded banquet and meeting space, reimaged bar spaces, hotel rooms, casino pit, front desk registration, the addition of a new food hall concept and a complete transformation of the entire casino floor.

Double Progressive Bingo

This past July Glenna D., a Legit True Rewards member from Rancho Cucamonga, California, won the Double Progressive Bingo Jackpot at the Edgewater Casino Resort in Laughlin, taking home $56,826. Her winning card achieved a full coverall within the posted number of balls, triggering a payout that had been building since late May. Double Progressive Bingo is a coverall game that starts at 32 numbers and progresses every 14 days until it reaches the 35th number, where it will remain until the jackpot is won.

The Great Bingo Revival

Lake Tahoe, Calif.—In 2012, the Reverend Rusty Reams found himself surrounded by strangers singing Happy Birthday to him after he won a game of bingo. The connection he felt that night was the catalyst for a nine-year mission to bring that feeling to everyone—and The Great Bingo Revival was born. Reams has transformed bingo from a game to an event, adding costumed dancers, interactive prizes and the sounds of everyone’s favorite disco and funk tunes. He continues to spread the message that “bingo saves.” He’s a bingo-vangelist on a mission to uplift and connect party guests with 90 minutes of pure joy and positivity. He hasn’t changed the game itself but has surrounded it with infectious music, the lively steps of the “BinGo-Go Dancers” and his tireless energy for a rhythm, funk and soul explosion that’s attracting an impressive list of corporate and private clients. Reams and his band of bingo players have entertained at events of major corporate clients like Google; engaged revelers at some of the biggest music festivals in the U.S.; and performed at exclusive private parties and country clubs. The show is customized for audiences from 8 to 88 and beyond, suitable for a child’s birthday party or a late-night bash.

DEAR PAWS: As a seasoned traveler with hunting dogs, as well as puppies and family pets, going cross-state and cross-country, I find that you left out a few crucial items in your travel list important for dog safety/health when traveling.

First, an IIHS/NHTSA approved crate(s) for the dog(s) or, at minimum, safety belt harness(es) that will restrain the dog(s) in the event of a crash. Small dogs sitting on laps are not “restrained.”

Second, a basic animal first aid kit in case of emergency due to a cut, bite, ingestion of something, etc., before one can get to emergency vet care on a trip.

Third, water. It’s always best to bring at least a couple quarts of water from home to have handy for rest areas or pull-offs with no services like running water.

Thank you for considering my input on this topic.— Betsy M., via email

DEAR BETSY: Absolutely essential items! Thank you for adding to the list. A separate first aid kit for pets, included in their bag of supplies so that it’s easy to find, is important. And using an Insurance Institute for Highway Safety (IIHS) or National Highway Traffic Safety Administration (NHTSA) approved crate has been shown to reduce or prevent pet injuries in the event of a crash. For dogs in the back seat, rather than a crate, a pet safety belt and harness is a much safer option than a collar and leash, or worse, just letting your pet sit unbelted.

Make these investments for your pet before a trip – and for everyday travel.

Send your tips, comments or questions to ask@pawscorner.com.

Soldier wins in new state

A U.S. soldier got a warm welcome in Pennsylvania after winning the local lottery shortly after moving to the state. In June, Christopher Lehman of Beaver County, northwest of Pittsburgh, was presented a commemorative check of just over $1.3 million after he played the Pennsylvania Lottery’s Jackpot Spectacular online game on May 30th. “My wife always says I have good luck,” Lehman told Pennsylvania Lottery officials when he claimed his big win. While he and his wife, Judith Lehman, were fairly new to the city, he was even newer to the game. Lehman won the lottery the same day he created his online account for the PA Lottery’s online portion.

The Lehmans plan to use their earnings to pay off their mortgage and Judith’s car loan. Christopher said the rest will likely go toward investing. The family is celebrating another milestone as Christopher’s youngest daughter graduated from the Army’s basic training program, also known as Basic Combat Training in June. Christopher shared that he is very proud and excited to travel to celebrate her accomplishment.

Veterans Post

The Dole Act

Have you wondered what exactly is included in the Senator Elizabeth Dole 21st Century Veterans Healthcare and Benefits Improvement Act? There’s one way to find out: Scroll through it. There’s more to the Act than you might imagine, and all of it is to benefit you.

Sec. 301 calls for burial benefits for veterans who were under hospice care at the time of their death. It concerns those veterans who pass away between July 1, 2025, and Oct. 1, 2026 and who are receiving VA medical or nursing care before receiving hospice care—they will now receive full VA burial allowance. To read more, see www.va.gov/burials-memorials. Should you also wish to apply for pre-need eligibility to make it easier for family when the time comes, there is info on that page as well.

Sec. 143 addresses the reimbursement of ambulance cost for veterans in rural areas. This might be by ambulance or air ambulance, to the nearest hospital that can meet the needs of the veteran. Be sure of the details on this one if you might use this service. Read the definitions in the text because coverage varies by disability rating, distance to hospital and so on. This benefit is likely to change after September 30, 2026, and is worth paying attention to because the total accumulative benefit is $46,000 of coverage. Sec. 208 concerns the payment of full monthly housing stipend for those who are in their final semester of education assistance under the Post-911/Educational Assistance Program. Read the details if this applies to you.

And in a topic that’s near and dear to the hearts of many of us, Sec. 304 ensures that only licensed health care professionals do the medical disability exams.

To get the most out of the 97 pages of the Act, start at the top and scroll through the Table of Contents (www.congress.gov/118/plaws/publ210/PLAW-118publ210.pdf).

Zucchini bread

Dear Annie,
I love to bake. I have been asked for zucchini bread. Do you have a recipe that you would be willing to share with someone who loves bake? — Jacqui from Todd, NC

Dear Jacqui,
I have a friend, Marion, who has a friend named Shirley. Shirley makes a wonderful zucchini bread. I asked Marion if it would be alright to share this ideal recipe for zucchini bread. I am absolutely positive you will love it. — Annie

3 cups self-rising flour
2 teaspoons cinnamon
¾ cup pecans
2 cups sugar
½ cup vegetable oil
2 teaspoons vanilla
3 eggs (beat well)
1 18-oz. can crushed pineapple—save liquid
2 cups shredded fresh zucchini
½ cup sugar
1 teaspoon cinnamon
Non-stick vegetable oil coating

Preheat the oven to 350 degrees. In a large bowl, combine the flour, 2 teaspoons cinnamon, pecans and 2 cups sugar. In a large separate bowl, combine the oil, vanilla and eggs. Beat the egg mixture until creamy. Add the pineapple (with the liquid from the can). Add the dry ingredients to the liquid mixture and stir until mixed well. Add the shredded zucchini, stir until blended. Combine the additional sugar and cinnamon and pour 1/2 of it into 2-9-inch by 5-inch by 13-inch pans that have been sprayed with a non-stick vegetable oil coating. Pour the zucchini mixture into each pan (dividing evenly). Sprinkle the remaining cinnamon sugar on top of each pan. Bake for one hour.

Guy's Turn

by Guy Williams

A little dab'll do ya

Dear Guy,

I have a request. Would you mind mentioning in your column the gallons of perfume some women spray on themselves whenever they go out? Some nights it's almost overwhelming to be at Bingo and have all these different flowery smells everywhere. Some women will walk by and practically leave a vapor trail of perfume behind them. Others will actually sit in the hall and spray more perfume on themselves, when they already smell like an acre of roses.

I don't mean to make it sound like ALL women do this. But at my Bingo hall, it sure seems like it. Please, ladies, a little perfume goes a long way. Please give our burning eyes and itchy noses a rest! —Abe, via e-mail

Dear Abe,

Burning eyes and itchy nose? It sounds like you may have some hypersensitivity to the scents that waft around you. That said, I must agree that I have been in certain settings—at work, in church, and at Bingo, to name a few—where I too have felt a bit overwhelmed by someone's perfume. As a matter of fact, years ago I worked with a woman who wore so much of her particularly strong scent that you could be walking down an empty hallway and know that she had passed through the same area sometime earlier, because her "vapor trail," as you put it, was still hanging in the air.

Anyway, on behalf of Abe and others with sensitive sinuses—ladies (and gents for that matter) the next time you feel the urge to re-spritz before bingo, ask yourself if you really need that aroma boost. —Guy

The continuing adventures of Bingo Bob

Heading down the Ocmulgee River

Here I am, dear reader, with the second part of my Bingo Adventure. Between Sarah Mae being after me and work going south, It felt like life was bearing down on me heavy as a bucket of cement dumped in my drawers.

So, I grabbed my canoe and headed down the Ocmulgee to see where the river might take me. It started off dreamy enough, but like always, life had other plans. As I rounded a bend a big old log came drifting out of nowhere, and I felt the canoe rolling over. As I flipped, I thought it was the end—water pouring over my face, everything going black like the end of a movie. But just before the credits rolled, I felt the canoe tug me under a log. When I popped back up, I gasped a heap of God-given air and hung onto the side of the half-drowned canoe. It floated just enough to keep me from going under.

Once my senses came back, I spotted trees swaying on shore, leaves flickering like Christmas ornaments in the breeze. I hung there for the better part of an hour before hearing the low rumble of a motorboat. Upstream came an old aluminum jon boat with two fishermen grinning wide—until they saw me. The one up front stopped smiling and pointed.

“He’s too cold to talk,” he said, and reached down with hands the size of watermelons to haul me in. The man in back cleared his throat. “Name’s Clem. This here’s Jonathan. We’re gonna take you to Ma.”

We rode downriver until they tied up at an old wooden dock, half its boards were missing, and the rest sagged like a wet dog. In my shivering state, I barely made it up the walkway. The dock led to a little shack covered in fake brick shingles with a flag out front. When the wind caught it, I saw a bingo card with “I Love Bingo” printed across the bottom.

Inside, Ma sat hunched at a flickering computer screen, playing online bingo. Every time the screen changed, she brushed greasy blond strands of hair out of her eyes.

“Sit him next to Pa,” she said without looking away. Pa, red-eyed and half-slouched, watched TV. Every now and then he glanced at me, but when the screen faded out, he pulled out a stainless-steel Colt .45 and aimed it at the set.

“Bang. Bang,” he said. “Damn thing.” Luckily, it wasn’t loaded. “That’s the problem with this country,” Pa muttered.

Clem hacked something, then said, "Alright, Ma. Pa. Time to go." I was bone-tired, but Jonathan came in with a bundle of dry clothes and tossed it into my arms.

"You're comin' with us. Can't leave no stranger in the house. Last one stole a bunch of stuff. We took care of him," he said, rubbing his stomach with those watermelon hands.

We headed out to the van, and I started to get uneasy. They were giving me looks like they were sizing me up for something. Every time I turned around, they slowly looked away. At the bingo hall, they grabbed a table in the far corner. Folks kept sneaking glances our way. I figured maybe it was because of the Ozzy Osbourne shirt they'd loaned me—no sleeves, and Ozzy mid-bite on a bat's head.

When the caller got going, though, I forgot about them. By the last game—a $1,000 coverall—I was one number away. When “B-10” came out, I jumped up and hollered. I’d won enough to keep my bingo road trip alive.

When I got back from collecting the cash, they were gone. Outside, they were waiting by the van. Ma swept hair from her face and said, “My boys saved you. You’re part of our family now.” She reached for my cheek, but I pulled back. Clem cleared his throat. “Time to make you part of the family. But first — that money.”

“There’s time for that,” Ma said. “Once he’s part of the family, there won’t be any trouble about money.” That’s when I figured out “part of the family” was code for something I didn’t want to find out about. I was close to the back door, but the van was flying down the highway. I’d been in a motorcycle wreck—I knew pavement at fifty wasn’t friendly—but somehow it seemed better than what they had planned. So, when Clem started hacking again, I yanked the handle and bailed. The road tore me up, but I rolled, scrambled to my feet, and bolted for the woods. They yelled after me, but I kept running until the trees swallowed me whole.

Next month: Bingo John continues his exploration and finds an old boat and an old spirit.

Savvy Senior

“You ask the senior question, we find the savvy answer!”

Advil: How much is too much

Dear Savvy Senior,

I take Advil pretty regularly for arthritis pain and headaches, but how can I tell if I’m taking more than is safe? —Achy Alan

Dear Achy A.,

Ibuprofen—better known by one of its brand names, Advil, is one of the most popular medications on the market today for treating all different types of pain, headaches, fevers and cramps. Given the drug’s broad pain-reducing effects, safety record and availability over the counter (OTC), it’s no surprise that some people pop the little brownish-red tablets whenever they feel the slightest twinge of discomfort. But ibuprofen, which is also sold under brand names like Motrin and Nuprin, can pose certain health risks, especially for those with kidney or stomach issues. Here’s what you should know.

What’s Safe?

For most adults and children ages 12 years and older, the recommended OTC dose of ibuprofen is one (or two, if needed) 200-milligram tablets, caplets or gel caplets every four to six hours while symptoms persist. You shouldn’t take more than 1,200 mg (or six pills) in a 24-hour period. If you haven’t consulted a doctor about how much is safe, or if you aren’t certain about your risk factors, it’s best not to exceed the recommended limit of 1,200 milligrams a day. If you have chronic pain, or were recently injured or had surgery, your doctor may prescribe ibuprofen for you at a higher dose. Prescription tablets are usually stronger compared to the OTC dose, such as 600 mg and 800 mg. The maximum daily dose for prescription-strength ibuprofen is 3,200 mg in a 24-hour period. But it’s important only to take what your provider has prescribed for you.

Also be aware that ibuprofen is sometimes added to certain cold and flu medications, so always read the ingredient list on medications before using them.

Be Cautious

Ibuprofen belongs to a class of drugs known as nonsteroidal anti-inflammatory drugs, or NSAIDs, which reduce pain and inflammation by blocking the activity of certain enzymes. But these enzymes also help maintain kidney and liver function and regulate the balance of fluids and electrolytes in your body. So, taking ibuprofen can be dangerous for patients with kidney disease or failure; those with liver damage or cirrhosis; and people with conditions that put strain on their kidneys, like high blood pressure or heart failure. Those at high risk for these conditions—as well as for stomach ulcers, heart attacks, strokes or bleeding problems—should talk with their doctors before taking ibuprofen. People who take medications such as diuretics, anticoagulants, ACE inhibitors or ARBs (angiotensin receptor blockers) to manage cardiovascular issues should also be careful, because ibuprofen stresses the kidneys and the heart. To reduce these health risks, don’t take the maximum recommended dose for more than a week or two at a time. If you are needing it for more than two weeks, or you’re turning to ibuprofen every day to keep your aches and pains in check, you need to see your doctor. When taken for long periods, ibuprofen can also increase the risk of stomach ulcers. The drug inhibits enzymes that, among other things, aid in

Hit up for cash at Bingo

Dear Aunt Bingo,

There is a big problem with a patron who plays Bingo in my hall. She comes to Bingo with no money. She bothers a lot of people to lend her money, including a few Bingo workers. Bingo players are really tired of her asking them to lend her money. She is causing them to go elsewhere to play Bingo, just to avoid her. In my opinion, if she has no money to play Bingo, she should stay home! What do you think? —Annoyed Bingo Player, Michigan the production of mucus that lines and protects the stomach lining, so without these enzymes, the stomach becomes vulnerable to irritation and damage. Alternatives Some alternatives to ibuprofen you should talk to your doctor about include acetaminophen (Tylenol), topical NSAIDs (diclofenac gel) that is not absorbed into the blood to the same extent as oral NSAIDs, nonacetylated salicylates, curcumin (an active ingredient in turmeric) and acupuncture.

Dear Annoyed,

To quote former First Lady Nancy Regan, “Just Say No.” The only reason I can imagine why this woman does this over and over again is because it works. If people keep shelling out money, why would she stop asking? Frankly, I’m a bit surprised that the Bingo workers she’s approached haven’t taken this up with their boss. If it is as frequent as you make it sound, this is bordering on panhandling, which management should put a stop to. If someone were to repeatedly ask me for money at Bingo, I would bluntly but politely tell him or her that I do not have the extra money to give, and to please stop asking me. If it happened after that, I would complain to someone in charge. Bingo is a place to go to relax and have fun. If someone repeatedly intrudes on that fun and relaxation, you have every right to tell them to leave you alone, or to complain to those in charge and have them put a stop to it. —Aunt Bingo

The Flying Dutchman

In poker, a cooler is the term used to describe a situation in which a player has a very strong hand, but loses to an even stronger hand held by an opponent. This usually happens in a situation where the strength of both hands would, in most cases, be unbeatable or very strong, and therefore it’s almost impossible to fold. Let’s look at an example.

The 2025 World Series of Poker (WSOP) at the Horseshoe & Paris Casinos in Las Vegas was comprised of 100 live events. One of them was the popular Event #64: $1,000 Super Seniors, which required players to be at least 60 years old to play.

That tournament attracted 3,338 entrants and awarded $2,937,440 in prize money. On Day 2, PokerNews was on-site and captured a big hand involving Marcel Luske, who poker fans might know as “The Flying Dutchman” from his early appearances of the WSOP on ESPN.

It was Level 19 (6,000/12,000/12,000) when Luske, known for humming and singing at the poker table, raised to 23,000 from middle position and fellow poker pro Kenna James called. Serge Didisheim then moved all in for 172,000 from the big blind and Luske jammed over the top for 832,000 total. James thought long and hard about what to do and eventually called off his stack.

Marcel Luske: AcAh
Serge Didisheim: KsKd
Kenna James: QhQd
It was a huge cooler as the trio each held one of the three best hands in poker. According to a poker odds calculator, Luske was a 66.74% favorite to win the hand, though that dropped to just 8.97% when the flop came down QsJsJh to give James a come-from-behind full house.

The 5c turn cut Luske’s & Didisheim’s chances to just 4.76% each, with the former needed an ace and the latter a king.

Well, Lady Luck smiled on Luske as the As spiked on the river to give him aces full of jacks, which beat the queens full of James. Stacks were checked, and Luske barely had James covered with just 30,000 more.

Didisheim finished the tournament in 173rd place for $2,659, while James took 172nd for the same amount of money. Meanwhile, that hand helped propel Luske to a deep run in the tournament, ultimately finishing in 10th place for $28,244.

The concept of a cooler is significant in poker as it highlights the element of luck involved in the game. Even with a very strong hand, a player can still lose to a stronger one. It’s a reminder that poker is not just about skill but also involves a degree of chance.

What’s New in Nevada

Blake Shelton returns

Country superstar Blake Shelton returns to the Colosseum at Caesars Palace early next year. Shelton played eight shows there last February and opened his mammoth Ole Red restaurant and bar at the Grand Bazaar Shops a year before that. The eight shows will take place on January 15, 18, 21, 23, 24, 28, 30, and 31, 2026.

Third Zippy’s

Zippy’s, the Hawaiian heartthrob restaurant chain, opened its third location in Las Vegas in September. All three remain the only Zippy’s outside of Hawaii. The first Vegas venue is near Rainbow Blvd. and the 215 Beltaway; the second opened in March on Hualapai Road near Tropicana Avenue. The latest location is in Henderson at 9570 S. Eastern Ave., just north of St. Rose Parkway.

Five high-priced Las Vegas steaks

Fox News recently ran a story on “once-in-a-lifetime meals” in Las Vegas, featuring five steak dinners that cost more than $300 and three of them hitting four figures. The most expensive came in at $1,500: the Tomahawk Feast at One Steakhouse at Virgin. This is a monster 18-pound frenched bone-in rib eye that serves up to 12 eaters, is carved at the table, and comes with six sides. The Beef Case at Fontainebleau’s Papi Steak costs $1,000 but feeds only two; it’s a 3.5-pound tomahawk that’s served in a custom diamond-studded suitcase. For $999.90, you can also get a 48-ounce Japanese purebred Freedom Wagyu tomahawk at Four Sixes Ranch Steakhouse at the Wynn. The Vaca Vieja (Old Cow) at Bazaar Meat by José Andrés is a bone-in steak (of various cuts) from eight- to ten-year-old more flavorful cows grown on certified-organic non-GMO ranches in northern California; they cost $90 per ounce, so an eight-ouncer runs $720 (you can order a two-bite sample for $64). Finally, the Taste of Japan at Resort World’s Carversteak offers a selection of Japanese A5 wagyu for $300 for a four-ounce minimum, plus $75 per additional ounce, so eight ounces are a mere $600—a Las Vegas bargain!

Universal Horror VIP Experience

Universal Horror Unleashed opened recently at Area15 with ticket prices starting at $69; depending on date and time, they rise to $99 and includes one entry to all four houses. An unlimited-access day pass ranges from $99 to $149. But Universal Parks News Today reports that another option, the “Haunted High Rollers VIP Experience Package,” is now available “for those who demand more than just a scare.” For a mere $2,750 to $2,900, again depending on the time and day, you too can avail yourself of this three-hour “elevated” horror experience for up to six. It includes expedited admission; a personal host; a meet and greet with a Horror Unleashed artist (subject to availability); $450 food-and-beverage credit with a dedicated server at a “semi-private” table in the restaurants; bottle service; and a discount on merch.
