

Feel the Magic, and Go Out There and Play!

© Ellyn Dye

Can you feel it? Can you feel the Magic in the air? Can you feel the pregnant potential of the moment, of the times? Can you remember why you chose to BE here now? Why you prepared for decades—even Millennia—to be here now? The clock is about to strike Midnight. All the revelers are gathered. And the Masks are about to come off. A hush has fallen over the crowd. There is a giant intake of breath. Everyone is dying to know—but no one knows for sure—what will be revealed. No one knows how it will play out. The nervous tension rises, and everyone tries to figure out just exactly what will happen as the 12-12-12 gateway and the oft-touted “end” of the Mayan Calendar, 12-21-12, approach.

Breathe! Let go! Do not try to control the uncontrollable! Do not try to fathom the unfathomable or express the ineffable! The need to know, the need to control, stems from fear. Let that go! Just wait and be surprised, and excited, and amazed at what transpires! How funny it will be to see—when the Masks are gone—that the person who was the veritable thorn in your side for so long is really your truest and dearest friend, the rose that resides deep in your soul family! Or to find that the one who always felt like the sand in your oyster was, in fact, a true friend who was scratching away to help you allow yourself to be the true Pearl that you are?

Your level of surprise at the revelations will depend on the thickness of the “veil of forgetting” that you wrapped around yourself in order to completely get into character. Such Method actors, one and all, totally in character until the very end! These have been the greatest revels ever! The greatest of plays, scripted and performed magnificently by each and every one here. And watched and applauded by the entire Universe! And here it is, almost time for the curtain to fall on this particular stage, on this particular play, on this particular “reality” program!

You are the grand creators! You, who have been pretending to be small and limited and powerless. You have played your roles so well, and it has been such a long-running show! Many, many of you are feeling bone weary from taking this show on the road for so long. You have forgotten what great fun you had, as you each played all the different parts in the play and the troupe moved from place to place (and time to time). But the novelty has more than worn off, and you are not sure you will be able to hang on long enough to make it through these final minutes to the curtain call. And you are more than ready for something new. Been there, done that. Got those tee shirts. Don’t want any more! Perhaps you’ve been playing this small, limited, powerless role for so long—and so very, very well—that you forgot it was merely a role in a very good play? And one that you collectively wrote for yourselves!

Can you feel it? Rouse yourselves, oh weary actors! It is time to choose what you want to do next! Even those who seemingly have “slept late” will begin to wake up and see—through the ever-thinning veils—the Truth of Who You Are, the Truth of All That Is, the Unity, and the Oneness. The Masks will come off, the costumes will be returned to the costume shop, the props will be put away. Even now, at night as your bodies sleep, you are all meeting in the “green room in the ethers” deciding and working on what will happen next: You are taking down the sets, packing everything up, putting the final touches on the new script, and, yes, even doing a bit of preliminary rehearsing and giving each other “notes.” No wonder many of you feel exhausted! And yes, many are choosing to sit out for a time and be part of the audience, cheering and applauding the rest of you on!

Can you feel it? Can you feel the Magic in the air? Can you feel the Change that has been brewing, the change that you have caused and created? Can you imagine even more change, as you finally stop trying to control it all and let yourself go, and truly usher in the Golden Age? Can you imagine creating Heaven on Earth? Why not do just that? Imagine creating Heaven on Earth! What does it look like? Imagine it! Dream it! It lies at your doorstep. The bell has been rung. The door is swinging open. You have only to cross the threshold into the NEW and claim it.

Can you feel it? Can you feel the Magic in the air? Venture out and play. Pretend. Imagine. And watch it form in front of you! And by all means, laugh until you fall over! Grab that ethereal modeling clay and start making something wonderful for everyone. Create magical free energy, instantaneous healing modalities, and replicators for food, clothing, and fun! Invent to your heart's content!

It will not all happen in an instant, simultaneously for everyone. How could it? The Great Shift has been brewing and building for a long, long time. There really is no sudden about it. Many have been feeling it for decades, yearning for it to hurry, to complete, to present itself, to be done. But the Great Shift has been there all along, for those with eyes to see and hearts to feel. And every human being on the planet has been living this Great Shift in every moment, knowingly or unknowingly, consciously or unconsciously, creating and re-creating, experimenting and choosing, every moment of every day, over and over and over again. There is no "completion." There is ongoing Shift, ongoing creation. There is no "end," only perpetual beginning of the new and the potentially wonderful.

If you have been paying attention, you have seen and felt the changes coming, faster and faster, with more and more intensity over the last few decades. Stop and review, especially if you have been so caught up in your role that you haven't really noticed. Pause and reflect. How have things changed? Since the 50's? Since the 70's? The 90's? Or the year 2000?? Ah, ah, ah! No, no, no! Let go of that judgment for a moment, and just look at the changes. Just observe. And as you reflect on all those changes, can you feel the momentum of the energies that you have traveled to create them? Can you feel the momentum that is still here and growing, for greater, more wonderful, and more finely-honed creation?

Of course, you will see there have been missteps, and mistakes here and there. Some mistakes may have seemed like a runaway train, with great tragedy! Others have been things that seemed like a good idea at the time, but did not work out so well in practice. And there were many things started that would be wonderful, but were not quite completed, or that were forgotten for a time as everyone shifted and focused on something else. With change happening at such a frenetic pace, it could sometimes be difficult to maintain enough focus to bring some of the most brilliant ideas into complete fruition, or to know which ideas to pursue.

And yes, there were times of giving over power and trusting this group or that group to change something or create something new, only to find that what they created wasn't what you wanted. Perhaps some of those new creations need some tweaking to make them sustainable and beneficial for ALL. So take your power back, revisit those creations, and make them better!

Humans just hate making mistakes or, worse, falling down, picking themselves up, and starting again, don't they? It is fine for children learning to walk to do that, but adults must get things right every time on the first try! How silly is that? Making mistakes—or falling down, picking oneself up, and running off in a different direction—is exactly how change and meaningful growth comes about in human form!

But do, please, pause and reflect again. Humans are so quick to judge! It is, perhaps, the thing you do best (and certainly most often). Look again, and see the nuggets of gold in all of those so-called missteps, all of those so-called mistakes. For there is, indeed, gold there, if only you would look. If only you could see it. Perhaps they were not mistakes and missteps after all? Perhaps the mistake was your perception of it? Or your judgment of it, perhaps? If you take responsibility for participating in collectively creating what you now perceive, you can begin to perceive that creation differently. You can actually begin to perceive how very flawless and perfect that creation really is!

And from that perspective it is useful to discuss what will happen on December 12. Or December 21. Or December whatever.... Or even January 1, 2013.

What do you think will happen? What do you imagine will happen? What do you wish to have happen on or after one—or any—of those dates? What would you like to create?

There is not going to be a moment when everyone on planet earth will carry exactly the same awareness, exactly the same vibration, exactly the same consciousness, exactly the same desires. It is the free-will planet, after all, and will continue to be so. You would all find it to be quite boring, otherwise! But you will see, more and more, that awareness, vibration, consciousness, and desires are, in fact, changing significantly for everyone. And this will continue and become more apparent.

How, and how quickly, those changes are experienced depends on each individual's choice—not necessarily the choice of the conscious mind; more likely the choice of the deeper multi-dimensional Self. Some of you may choose to have sudden, significant changes, similar to the life-altering shifts reported after near-death experiences (NDEs). And you may, in fact, choose to have that happen on a particular day. But many, many others will choose to experience those significant changes more gradually. Most humans prefer gradual change, if they have to have change at all. And in this case, at this time, Shift will happen, one way or another. Resistance is futile... and possibly painful!

Either way, do not place judgment on yourself or others, based on whether or not there is significant, sudden change on one of those dates. Do not set yourself up for disappointment or despair if it does not happen to you in that way on that day. And do not set yourself up to feel superior if it happens that way for you, but not for others. That is merely the ego, creating very specific expectations and clinging to duality and drama! Of course, if you really enjoy those feelings, you are welcome to set yourself up and experience them as much as you want! But why bother?

It might be more beneficial, and certainly more peaceful, to let go of any specific expectations, trust that all will be well, and that everything will proceed at the perfect pace in the perfect way, and then be excited and grateful for every single shift and change, large or small, that you experience and perceive. And look for those changes! If you only look for “lack of change” or “not enough change,” that is exactly what you will see! In fact, that is all you will see!

The huge influx of energy, the momentum of change, and the Great Shift will continue for everyone and everything on the planet, and for the planet herself for years to come. Deep inner motivations, deep beliefs, and deeply ingrained patterns of thinking and behaving will continue to change for everyone. Inner change creates “outer” change on the personal, local, national, and global level. As the Shift intensifies, “As within, so without” will become the obvious truth, and more and more people will choose to play and create in ways that are sustainable and beneficial to all. Yes, some will still cling to their drama. Some will still cling to beliefs, relationships, self-definitions, judgments, traditions, and ways of being that are no longer sustainable. All will experience inner shifts in their own timing, in a way that is absolutely perfect.

There is no need to worry about, or pay attention to, what anyone else is doing, experiencing, perceiving, or creating. What someone else is doing is up to them, it is all about them, and they will experience the result of it . . . fairly quickly! Pay attention, instead, to what you are thinking and doing, and where you are placing your attention. If you are focused on someone else's creation, you are not focused on your own, and you will be creating un-consciously. If you are comparing your shifts and changes to anyone else's, you are merely revealing where you still carry self-doubt and lack of trust in yourself. Whatever you experience will be the perfect experience for you! Whatever someone else experiences will be their perfect experience. Those experiences will likely be different! Relax and enjoy, and stop taking it all so seriously. You do not have to save the world or anyone else in it!

The Great Shift is here. It is not limited to one, particular day, although amazing things can and will happen on 12-12-12 and on 12-21-12. Amazing changes can and will happen on every other day, as well. Release your expectations, because they become your limitations! Release your idea of what it has to look like, or feel like, or how it has to all play out. Release fear. Be alert and go with the flow. Observe. Enjoy the dance. Have fun. Laugh. Love each other. Laugh some more. Imagine and dream your New World into being, just as you want it for yourself and others. . . and watch it miraculously appear!

And KNOW in your deepest heart of hearts that All is Well; that you are protected, supported and loved beyond measure; that you are amazing, divine, powerful beings; and that you are all magnificent creators, right smack in the middle of the totally divine process of Creating Heaven on Earth. Right here. Right now.

Can you feel it?
