

Aeonium 'Plum Petals'

We love the pinwheel rosettes of leaves with this family. People are fascinated by the Zwartkop variety, with its purple-black leaves (but that color's almost too negative). When that "pinwheel" of leaves is almost a foot across, it's spectacular! But if that's growing on a long, tube-like, bare woody stem underneath, its beauty is diminished. That's why we developed the first freely branching, large headed purple pinwheel. Full foliage, top to bottom. Its color is more wine-like than black, so it's more compatible in the color scheme. Aeonium 'Plum Petals'. Pour me a glass.
