Complete the set with Major Emery in WWI, published 2019:

Major John G. Emery in World War I – Early Leader of The American Legion. We are indebted to alumna Susan Brandt (his granddaughter) and her family for allowing us to bring this important project to fruition after more than three years of work and research.

This monograph is based on Emery’s personal letters, military papers, journals, his personally authored American Legion magazine articles, and two albums of photographs. It offers an intimate look at soldiers’ day-to-day life on the battlefields of France and their poignant encounters with French citizens in war-torn communities.

This hardcover 8 ½ x 11 book is 180 pages and includes an index. It features more than 250 of his photographs, dozens of original maps, personal letters, and reminiscences about his WWI experiences in the 18th Infantry, 1st Division, of the AEF. After the war, Emery who was from Grand Rapids, Michigan, was the 3rd commander of The American Legion. He led and similarly documented the Legion’s 250-man delegation to France in 1921.

Students with the Legacy Initiative Project were helpful in completing initial research into the 18th Infantry at the National Archives, as well as reviewing photographs and maps, and proofing materials.

John G. Emery’s extensive and remarkable WWI Collection adds significantly to the history of the 18th Infantry Regiment in the First Division. It is also important because it documents the American Legion’s pilgrimage to France in 1921 to dedicate memorials to the war dead. We are especially pleased that this book has received advance praise from numerous individuals, especially from organizations that relate to WWI history and The American Legion.

“Major John G. Emery in World War I is a must-read that will provide you a front-row seat to a time most citizens have no idea how the ‘Great War’ impacted the world. Your emotions will be stretched as you witness man’s inhumanity to man and are given a taste of why brotherhood gives the warrior the strength to survive. You will not be disappointed.”—J. Stewart Goodwin, Brig Gen, USAF (Ret), Executive Director, Indiana War Memorials Commission

The story of “Major John G. Emery in World War I offers superb insight into the World War I experiences of an 18th Infantry regiment, First Division, World War I Doughboy officer’s experiences on the Western Front. Chronologically sequenced and well organized, Lerch’s added editorials bring Major Emery’s World War I memoirs to life and into proper historical context for readers.” – Krewasky A. Salter, Executive Director, First Division Museum at Cantigny Park

Next Legacy Initiative monograph is in the works 2021-2022! “Dear Stellie—Love Letters from a Field Surgeon in WWII” More than 250 letters were written by St. Louis, Missouri surgeon, Dr. Pierce W. Powers, assigned to the 4th Auxiliary Surgical Group. To take his mind off the daily carnage which he experienced, he wrote highly descriptive letters to his new wife, Estelle Brabant Powers—as if conversing with her about the scenery as she “rides” along with him in his Jeep. His surgical duties took him from southern England to Omaha Beach on D+1, then to Utah Beach on D+2. After Normandy, his Surgical Group moved through liberated Paris with Patton’s Third Army. Later, his group of surgeons assisted during the battle of the Bulge while quartered in Luxembourg. Letters from spring and summer of 1945 describe even more experiences in Germany, Austria, and Czechoslovakia. Original family photos, surgical journal, and maps.
