

Lee J. Maltenfort A1C, USAF News, Saigon (63-64)

1938 – August 3, 2018

Lee Jacob Maltenfort, 80, of Savannah, and loving husband of Judy Roberta Maltenfort, died Friday August 3, 2018 at Candler Hospital in Savannah.

Born in Irvington, N.J., he was the son of Paul and Pauline Grad Maltenfort. Lee touched many lives in Savannah. He and Judy moved to Savannah in 1992. He was a charter member of Friends of Johnny Mercer, was the head of volunteers at the Mighty 8th Air Force Museum, and was chairman of the Bonaventure Historical Society. Lee considered himself a born again southerner. He was a graduate of Trenton State College where he worked as a reporter for the Trentonian and during that time he also worked as a press agent and wrote jokes for Jack Parr. Lee was a veteran of the United States Air Force, having served in the Vietnam War as a radio broadcaster. When he returned to the United States, Lee married Judy and went to work at ABC. Lee and Judy started a business called "The Upstairs Maids" which produced humorous mannequin resembling Victorian Servants, some with voice boxes, for which they had showrooms all over the United States, Japan, and Canada.

Lee is survived by his wife, Judy Roberta Maltenfort of Savannah; and a son, Dr. Mitchell Maltenfort, and his wife, Jennifer Davis Maltenfort of Philadelphia, PA.
