Wise New Home Purchase Check List

Buying a new home is an exciting time in any person's life. An individual is likely only to purchase a home a few times in their life, so making the best choice possible is crucial for them and their family. Most people look closely at the interior of the home, such as floor plans, paint schemes and cabinetry. But what about all the important items you can't see? At Sun Porch Homes we provide the following Check List, to ensure all Home Buyers have a positive Home Buying Experience.

What is the floor system between the second and first floor made of?

Most non-custom home builders use inexpensive 2x10 lumber for its floor joists. Instead of this cheaper route we use a high-performance engineered floor system known as an I-joist. Although more than double the cost, I-joists are a special high-end engineered product that strengthens the floor so its less likely to bow, twist or split. I-joists provide dimensional soundness while offering little or no shrinkage which helps to eliminate squeaky floors.

My children have health issues, so I am concerned about air quality in my home. What building materials do you use?

Sun Porch Homes believes the use of low Volatile Organic Compounds (VOCs) creates an environment offering improved health and comfort for your family with less stress on their respiratory and immune systems. Although some of these health benefits may be difficult to see, your body will thank you for choosing not to breathe in toxins. Sun Porch Homes prides itself for using healthy products such as German flooring, low VOCs interior paint and maple wood cabinet doors.

I understand landscaping can cost me tens of thousand of dollars? Is landscaping included?

At Sun Porch Homes our landscaping package includes a fence on three sides, a gate and topsoil and/or glacier rock. Plus, aggregate finished concrete sidewalks and driveways. In our pre-sold homes, we always walk the property with our New Home Buyers and try to incorporate their landscaping preferences the best we can. By including landscaping in our homes our Buyers avoid an unplanned expense.

I would like to buy a home with a secondary suite. What kind of sound insulation do you use?

The BC Building Code does not require any specific standard for sound insulation. At Sun Porch Homes we want everyone to live in a comfortable home. For the common wall between the Suite and the main living area, we use a 2x6 instead of a 2x4 wall. Then we insulate the walls and ceilings greatly reducing sound transfer. Lastly, we use specialized steel spacers in the wall and ceiling that absorbs vibrations and reduces noise even more.

How do I know corners aren't being cut? What do you do to ensure my peace of mind?

Sun Porch Homes goes beyond the BC Building code and pours an 8" wide foundation wall with extra reinforcing steel, we further insulate the entire ground floor concrete slab, going well beyond the current Building Code. Collectively these efforts ensure our homes are solidly built and well insulated.

I worry about energy costs. How do I know this home is energy efficient?

Sun Porch Homes is a certified BuiltGreen builder. Although we only officially certify our homes when requested, we build all of our homes to this standard. We conduct airtightness tests at both mid-construction and at the end of construction to ensure airtightness. This focus means lower heating bills, reduced room-to-room temperature variances, the elimination of noticeable drafts and reduced sound transfer. We also install high efficiency LED lightbulbs through our homes ... now ... how cool is that?

How do I know Sun Porch Homes is well qualified? What are your credentials?

Sun Porch Homes enthusiastically pursues its professional development and accreditations. This continuous development process gives us an avenue to enhance our employee training which keeps more building tasks in-house. Some of our staff and Company certifications include: Master Builder (only a handful of people receive this highest certification), Certified Residential Building and Renovations Company, BBB A+, BuiltGreen, licensed electrical contractor with Technical Safety BC and more.
